Your personal score tells how much your employer lives up to national legal standards regarding work. To calculate your DecentWorkCheck, you must accumulate 1 point for each YES answer marked. Then compare it with the values in Table below:

is your amount of "YES" accumulated.

Kenya scored 33 times "YES" on 49 questions related to International Labour Standards

If your score is between 1 - 18

This score is unbelievable! Does your employer know we live in the 21st century? Ask for your rights. If there is a union active in your company or branch of industry, join it and appeal for help.

If your score is between 19 - 38

As you can see, there is ample room for improvement. But please don't tackle all these issues at once. Start where it hurts most. In the meantime, notify your union or WageIndicator about your situation, so they may help to improve it. When sending an email to us, please be specific about your complaint and if possible name your employer as well. Also, try and find out if your company officially adheres to a code known as Corporate Social Responsibility. If they do, they should live up to at least ILO standards. If they don't adhere to such a code yet, they should. Many companies do by now. You may bring this up.

If your score is between 39 - 49

You're pretty much out of the danger zone. Your employer adheres to most of the existing labour laws and regulations. But there is always room for improvement. So next time you talk to management about your work conditions, prepare well and consult this DecentWorkCheck as a checklist.

01/13 Work & Wages

Regulations on work and wages:

The Labour Institutions Act, 2007

Employment Act, 2007

Minimum Wage

In accordance with the provisions of the Labour Institutions Act 2007, workers' salaries must at least be equal to the minimum wage, ensuring every worker a decent standard of living consistent with the human dignity.

The National Labour Board, a tripartite body, is entrusted with the responsibility to advise the Labour Minister on, inter alia, appointment of wage councils. The wage rates are determined by Wage Councils constituted in accordance with Labour Institutions Act 2007. The wage councils are again tripartite bodies with worker, employer and independent experts representation. The members of the wages council are appointed for a period of three years. A wages council is entrusted with the function to investigate remuneration and conditions of employment in any sector; invite and consider written and oral representation, in prescribed manner, from interested parties; and make recommendations to the Minister on minimum wage remuneration and conditions of employment. Wages are determined for agriculture as well as general sector workers by the Agricultural and General Wage Councils constituted under the Labour Institutions Act. On the recommendation of these Councils, the Minister may issue Wages Order setting minimum rates of remuneration. Minimum wages vary by occupational sectors, skill levels and geographical areas. While determining the minimum wage, the Wage Council should take into account the following factors: the needs of workers and their families, taking into account the general level of wages in the country, the cost of living, social security benefits and the relative living standards of other social groups; economic factors, including the requirements of economic development, levels of productivity and the desirability of attaining and maintaining a high level of employment and the need to encourage investment; the ability of employers to carry on their business successfully; the operation of small, medium and micro enterprises; the alleviation of poverty; the minimum subsistence level; the likely impact of any proposed conditions of employment on current employment or the creation of employment; and any other relevant factor.

A wages order sets the minimum rates of remuneration; specify the types and manner of deductions as well as the maximum amount/percentage of deductions; maximum amount deducted from pay in respect of rations supplied by the employer; regulate task based and piece work; regulate outwork, casual work and contract work; and other related terms on remuneration.

An employer who fails to pay statutory minimum wage or provide a worker with conditions of employment as provided under the Wages Order commits an offence. Labour inspector is authorized to monitor and enforce compliance with the Labour Law. Non-compliance with the Employment Act is an offence, punishable by a fine of maximum 100,000 shillings and imprisonment of 2 years.

Regular Pay

Remuneration is the total value of all payments in money or in kind, made or owed to a worker arising from the employment of that worker. Labour Institutions Act defines remuneration as the amount paid or to be paid in cash to the employee by his employer clear of any deductions, except any deduction lawfully made.

The Employment Act 2007 regulates the payment of wages to all classes of workers. According to the Act, wages can be calculated on hourly, daily, weekly or monthly basis depending on the type of contract.

The Act requires the employer to pay a worker his wages in legal tender (Kenya Shillings) during the working hours at or near the place of work on agreed pay day in cash, cheque, money order or directly deposit the amount in that worker's bank account. Payment may be made to the person authorized by the worker to receive the wage on his/her behalf, in case of his/her absence.

Wages are due at the end of the day for casual employees; at the end of the employment period for workers engaged for a period not exceeding one month; at the end of month for workers employed for a period exceeding one month; at the end of period of or month, whichever is earlier, for workers who are employed for an indefinite period.

Payment of any allowance may be made with the worker's consent, provided that the allowance is for the worker's personal benefit and does not include any intoxicating spirit or noxious drug.

Whenever an attachment against the property of an employer is issued, the proceeds realized upon execution are paid to the court until a decree obtained with respect to worker's wages for a period of six months has been satisfied. However, this provision is not applicable when the employer is undergoing insolvency.

The employer may not compel or restrict the worker to spend his/her wages in a certain way for a particular purpose in a particular place. No wages are payable to a worker in respect of a period during which the employee is detained in custody or is serving a sentence of imprisonment imposed under any law.

Deduction of wages is prohibited in exchange for job placement. Wages may be deducted in cases including contribution to a provident fund; reasonable amount for damage/loss of employer's property; amount not exceeding a day's wage where the worker is unlawfully absent; amount equal to any shortage caused by the negligence or dishonesty of the worker; amount paid in error to worker; deductions permitted by any written law; for amount requested by worker in writing for any cause; and amount due and payable by the employee and in accordance with the written terms of an agreement and any other amounts prescribed by law. The total amount of deductions made at any one time should be up to two-thirds of the worker's wages or such other amounts as may be determined under the law.

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

An employer should provide pay slips to all workers at or before each pay day except casual employee or an employee engaged on piece-rate or task-rate terms or for any period not exceeding six months. These pay slips should contain certain particulars including the gross amount of the wages or salary of the worker; the amounts of any variable and statutory deductions from that gross amount and the purposes for which they are made; and where different parts of the net amount are paid in different ways, the amount and method of payment of each part-payment.

02/13 Compensation

Regulations on Compensation:

Regulation of Wages (General) Order 1982

Employment Act 2007

Overtime Compensation

According to the General Wages Order, normal working hours are 52 per week and 60 hours per week for the night workers. Normal working hours per day are not clearly mentioned, however, for young workers normal working hours are 6 per day.

In accordance with the Employment Act 2007, employer may set working hours in such a way that the worker gets a day off in a week. An employer is required to pay at least 150% of the wage if overtime work is performed during normal working hours. Overtime payment for the workers that are not employed on hourly basis, is calculated on the basis of the basic hourly rate of at least one two-hundred-and twenty-fifth of the employee's basic minimum monthly wage.

The Wages Order also specifies that overtime plus time worked in normal hours per week may not exceed 116 hours in total in any period of 2 consecutive weeks. Thus a worker can work only 6 hours of overtime in a week. For night workers this limit is 144 hours per week. For night workers, 12 hours of overtime is allowed.

Although it would normally be considered a criminal offence to force workers to do overtime, still employers has the right to schedule overtime for their employees. Therefore, employees can be asked to work a reasonable amount of overtime to complete a job. However, collective bargaining agreements often restrict the authority of employers regarding overtime. The law does not provide for a compensatory time-off for overtime work done.

Sources: §5-6 of the Regulation of Wages (General) Order 1982; §27 of the Employment Act 2007

Night Work Compensation

There is no premium payment for night work. Working hours for night workers are more than day time workers. Normal working hours at night cannot exceed 60 hours per week and overtime of 24 hours is allowed in a period of 2 consecutive weeks. The total working time on a fortnightly basis, inclusive of overtime, may not exceed 144 hours for night workers.

Compensatory Holidays / Rest Days

No provision could be identified in laws to require an employer to provide compensatory rest day for working on weekly rest day or public holiday.

Weekend / Public Holiday Work Compensation

Workers may be required to work on weekly rest days and public holidays. In such circumstances when employees have to work on official holidays, they are entitled to receive wages at a premium rate of 200% of the normal hourly wage rate. Workers working on weekly rest days are entitled to premium pay at the rate of 200% of the normal wage rate.

03/13 Annual Leave & Holidays

Regulation on Annual Leave and Holidays:

Constitution of Kenya, 2010

Employment Act, 2007

Public Holidays Act 1984

Regulation of Wages (General) Order, 1982

Paid Vacation / Annual Leave

The Employment Act provides for annual leave to all workers on completion of one year of service. The full time workers are entitled to 1.75 days of annual leave for one month of service. This means 21 working days for 12 months of service.

In the event of termination of employment after an employee has completed two or more consecutive months of service of the 12 months leave-earning period, he/she is entitled to one and three-quarter days of leave with full pay for each completed month of service in that period to be taken consecutively. Thus a worker with 8 months of service is entitled to only 14 days of annual leave. A worker may receive payment in lieu of annual leave in case of contract termination/resignation and if the employee has accrued a number of leave days. In such case, employer is required to pay an employee not less than one and three-quarter days' worth wages for every completed month of service in that period.

Annual leave may be taken under different intervals during the year. An employer may split the annual leave with worker's consent. However, the minimum length of annual leave, taken at one time and during the first 12 months of the entitlement of the annual leave, has to be at least two uninterrupted working days unless otherwise specified in the employment contract. Carrying over of annual leave is allowed however such leave has to be taken within 18 months of its eligibility. The annual leave does not include public holidays, weekly rest days and other types of leave allowed under the law.

The worker is entitled to receive his full pay for the period of annual leave. Full pay includes wages and salary at the basic minimum rate excluding any deductions from wages made by virtue of the Employment Act.

Pay on Public Holidays

Workers are entitled to paid Festival (public and religious) holidays. Festival holidays are announced by Kenyan Government at the start of calendar year (usually 11 in number). The public holidays are regulated under the Public Holidays Act. Constitution of Kenya also provides for national days as paid public holidays.

The public holidays are New Year's Day (January 01), Good Friday, Easter Monday, Labour Day (May 01), Madaraka Day (June 01), Idd – ul – Fitr (depends on moon sighting), Moi Day (October 10), Mashujaa/Kanyatta Day (October 20), Jamhuri (Independence) Day (December 12), Christmas Day (December 25), and Boxing Day (December 26).

Additional public holidays include idd-ul-Azha (depends on moon sighting) and Diwali (according to Hindu calendar), are specified to all the person belonging to the Islamic faith and Hindu faith respectively. The day in any year on which general election are held following the dissolution of Parliament and the day during which a President-elect is sworn in, are considered as a public holiday.

The Minister has the right to declare, by notice, any day to be a public holiday in addition or substitution of the days already considered as public holiday. If a public holiday falls on a Sunday, workers are given a day-off on the following working day.

Weekly Rest Days

Workers are entitled to 24 consecutive hours of rest per week. Employment Act has not specified any day as a weekly rest day. The employer and the worker may agree to defer the worker's weekly rest day. It may be rescheduled on the successive day or may be accumulated and taken at once as a fully paid leave of maximum fourteen days. Deferring of rest day is prohibited in case of young workers under sixteen years of age.

No provision could be found in law related to rest break and daily rest period.

04/13 Employment Security

Regulations on Employment Conditions:

Employment Act, 2007

Written Employment Particulars

Employment contracts are regulated under Employment Act 2007. A contract of employment is an agreement, whether oral or written, and whether expressed or implied, to employ or to serve as a worker for a certain period of time. It includes a contract of apprenticeship and indentured learnership but does not include a foreign contract of service.

Kenyan Employment Act requires that employment with duration of more than 3 months (and a contract of service which provides for the performance of any specified work which could not reasonably be expected to be completed within three months) should be in writing and written statement of particulars should be provided to a worker at the start of employment. The written particulars of employment must be given to the worker within two months of the beginning of employment.

An employment contract must specify the following: the name, age, permanent address and sex of the employee; the name of the employer; the job description of the employment; the date of commencement of the employment; the form and duration of the contract; the place of work; the hours of work; the remuneration, scale or rate of remuneration, the method of calculating that remuneration and details of any other benefits; the intervals at which remuneration is paid; and the date on which the employee's period of continuous employment began, taking into account any employment with a previous employer which counts towards that period; the duration of the contract; terms and conditions relating to entitlement to annual leave, including public holidays and holiday pay, incapacity to work due to sickness or injury; provision for sick pay and pensions and pension schemes; length of notice required to terminate the contract of employment; any collective agreements that directly affect the terms and conditions of the employment; disciplinary rules and any other prescribed matter.

In case a worker is required to work outside Kenya for a period of more than one month, the period of employment, the currency used for remuneration; and any benefits and any terms and conditions for the worker's repatriation to Kenya are mentioned in the contract

If there is a change in any of the above items, the employer is required to give a written statement containing the particulars of the change within a month after the change in question has occurred, or where that change results from the employee being required to work outside Kenya for a period of more than one month, the time when the employee leaves to start work if that is earlier.

Fixed Term Contracts

Kenyan labour Law allows hiring fixed term contract workers for tasks of permanent nature. No provisions could be located in the Employment Act on regulating the fixed term contracts (their maximum duration and renewals).

Probation Period

According to Employment Act, Probationary contract is an employment contract of up to twelve months duration or part thereof. It must be written and expressly states that it is for a probationary period.

Probationary period should not be set higher than 6 months; however it can be extended to one year with the consent of a worker. The probationary period cannot exceed one year as an aggregate.

Source: § 2 & 42 of the Employment Act, 2007

Notice Requirement

Termination of employment is regulated under the Employment Act. A worker may be terminated after serving due notice or paying in lieu of notice. Length of notice period depends on the type of employment contract.

- Notice period is not provided for a worker hired on daily basis; contract may be terminated at the end of working day without any prior notice
- at least seven days notice for workers during the probationary period (or payment in lieu of notice)
- Workers who get paid periodically for intervals shorter than one month (e.g. on weekly or fortnightly basis), a notice of equivalent period (a week or 15 days) may be served prior to contract termination
- If workers are paid on a monthly basis or longer interval, a 28-day notice must be served before contract termination

Length of notice period may be set in employment contract by mutual consent of employer and worker, provided that the period is more than that is provided by the Act. Notice should be written in language easily comprehended by the worker, otherwise someone has to explain it to the worker, orally, in language that he/she could comprehend.

If an employer fails to give the termination notice, he/she must provide the wages and benefits that the employee would have earned during the notice period on the basis of average daily earnings over the past 12 months (provision of compensation in lieu of notice). An employer is required to give reason of termination to the worker except in cases of summary dismissal and redundancy, but in all instances termination should be based in fair reasons (including termination by notice). It is prudent for an employer to follow a fair hearing/consultation procedure to explain reasons for termination prior to terminating a contract. A worker can still claim unfair termination and it is the duty of the employer to prove that the termination was fair and procedures were followed.

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

To decide whether termination was just and fair, the Industrial Court is required to consider the procedure adopted by the employer in the termination, the conduct and capability of the worker up to the date of termination, the extent of compliance by the employer of statutory requirements, the previous practice of the employer in dealing with circumstances that led to the termination, and the existence of any previous warning letters issued to the worker.

A worker may lodge a complaint with labour officer within three months from the date of the unfair termination. If the termination was unjust, he/she may recommend the employer to pay wages for the notice period required to be given; the proportion of wages due for the period the employee has worked and any other loss consequent upon dismissal arising between the date of dismissal and the date of expiry of the notice period; and the equivalent of a number of months' wages or salary for a period not exceeding 12 months based on the gross monthly wage or salary of the employee at the time of dismissal. All the amounts are subject to statutory deductions.

Where the labour officer finds the dismissal/termination unfair, he or she may recommend that the employer reinstates the worker and treat him or her as if the employment was never terminated, or re-engage the employee in work comparable to the one prior to his or her dismissal at the same wage.

Severance Pay

There is no provision for severance pay in legislation for reasons other than redundancy. Redundancy means the loss of employment by involuntary means through no fault of a worker, involving termination of employment at the initiative of the employer, where the services of a worker are superfluous and the practices commonly known as abolition of office, job or occupation and loss of employment.

Severance pay, paid by the employer, in Kenya is equivalent to 15 days basic wages for each completed year of employment.

Employment Act also contains provisions relating to service pay. It is payable for each completed year of employment, in the case of termination by notice in certain circumstances and its terms are fixed in employment contract. A worker is not entitled to service pay if he/she is a member of Registered Pension Fund, gratuity or service pay scheme established under collective agreement, any other scheme provided by employer whose terms are more favorable.

Regulations on health and safety:

The Occupational Safety and Health Act, 2007

Employer Cares

The Occupational Health and Safety Act (OSHA) provide for the health, safety and welfare of persons employed, and all persons lawfully present at workplaces and related matters.

It is obligatory for an occupier to provide and maintain plant and systems and procedures of work that are safe and without risk to workers' health. Employer must ensure safety and absence of risks to health in connection with the use, handling, storage and transport of articles and substances. Provision of such information, instruction, training and supervision of workers as is necessary is very crucial maintain safe and healthy workplace.

Workplace and work environment that is safe, without health risks and adequate as regards facilities and arrangements for the worker's welfare at work should be maintained. Workers should be well informed of any risks and imminent danger related to new technologies and they should participate in the application and review of safety and health measures.

Occupier must also ensure proper cleanliness, ventilation, lighting, drainage of floor, sanitary convenience, avoid overcrowding and control air pollution, noise and vibration at the workplace. Every occupier is required to establish a safety and health committee at the workplace in accordance with regulations prescribed under the law.

Preventive and protective measures should be taken after proper risk assessment (at least once a year) to ensure that all chemicals, machinery, equipment, tools and process are safe and without risk to health and comply with the requirements of safety and health provisions in this Act. An occupier who fails to comply with a duty imposed on him commits an offence and he/she is liable to a fine not exceeding 500,000 shillings or to imprisonment up to six months or to both.

All the above provisions are applicable also to the mine workers, as enunciated under the Mines Act 2016.

Equal Pay

In accordance with the Constitution of Kenya, all human being are born equal and are equal before the law. The Constitution recognizes the right to fair remuneration.

The Employment Act, 2007 requires every employer to ensure that men and women workers are paid equally for work of equal value. It is also a liable offence to discriminate in remuneration matters.

Source: § 27 & 41 of the Constitution of Kenya 2010; §5(5 & 6) of the Employment Act 2007

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment at workplace is prohibited by law and an employer is supposed to create a policy prohibiting sexual harassment at workplace. However, law does not propose any punishment.

In accordance with the Employment Act, a worker is harassed sexually if the employer or its representative or a co worker request (directly or indirectly) for any form of sexual favor in order to get preferential treatment at workplace; or threaten the worker of detrimental treatment on present or future employment status of the worker. Any kind of sexual behavior that makes the victim feel uncomfortable includes using language (written or spoken) or visual material of sexual nature; and showing physical behavior of sexual nature is considered sexual harassment.

In an establishment with 20 or more workers, employer may issue a policy statement on sexual harassment, which clearly defines sexual harassment and states that the workplace is free of sexual harassment. Employer must take measure to ensure that workers are not subjected to sexual harassment and take appropriate disciplinary measures against the person involved in sexual harassment.

The policy statement must also describe the procedure through which worker may bring the complaints of sexual harassment to the attention of the employer. Employer must keep confidential all the information related to the complainant except where disclosure is necessary for the purpose of investigation or taking disciplinary measures. Each worker should be well aware of the provisions of the policy statement.

Non-Discrimination

The Constitution of Kenya prohibits discrimination either directly or indirectly against any person on the basis of race, sex, pregnancy, marital status, health status, ethnic or social origin, colour, age, disability, religion, conscience, belief, culture, dress, language or birth.

Employment Act, with specific reference to employment, states that person's access to any institution, employment or facility, or the enjoyment of any right may not be denied because of person's belief or religion. The Act further prohibits employer from discrimination against a current or a prospective worker on the basis of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, nationality, ethnic or social origin, disability, pregnancy, mental status or HIV status. Discrimination in the process of recruitment, training, promotion, terms and conditions of employment, termination of employment and other matters related to employment is not allowed.

Anti-union discrimination and discrimination against person with disabilities is also prohibited under the Labour Relations Act and Persons with Disabilities Act 2003 respectively. In accordance with Persons with Disabilities Act, no person can deny a person with a disability access to opportunities for suitable employment. A qualified employee with a disability is subject to the same terms and conditions of employment and the same compensation, privileges, benefits, fringe benefits, incentives or allowances as qualified able-bodied employees. An employee with a disability is entitled to exemption from tax on all income accruing from his employment.

The National Council for Persons with Disabilities endeavors to ensure the implementation of five percent quota for persons with disabilities in all casual, emergency and contractual positions in employment in the public and private sectors.

According to Children Act, every child (under 18 years) has to be protected from economic exploitation and any work that is likely to be hazardous or interferes with the child's education, or is harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development.

The Act prohibits worst form of child labour, which include all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery; the use, procuring or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography or for pornographic performances; the use, procuring or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties; and work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of the child.

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

It is prohibited to employ children at night between 18:30 and 06:30 except when ordered by the Minister in case of emergency. The minimum age for hazardous work is 18 years.

An authorized officer may request medical examination of the children employed in an enterprise, at any point during the employment, in order to establish that their jobs are not beyond their physical capabilities.

Employer must keep and maintain a register of employed children indicating age and date of birth; date of entry into and of leaving the employment; and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

A person involved in worst form of child labour or who does not abide by the regulation related to the child's employment is liable to a fine up to 200,000 shillings or to imprisonment up to twelve months or to both.

Regulations on trade unions:

The Constitution of Kenya, 2010

Labour Relations Act, 2007

Labour Institutions Act 2007

Freedom to Join and Form a Union

The Constitution and the Labour Relations Act provide for Freedom of Association. Every worker has a right to form, join or participate in the activities and programs of a trade union (and leave a trade union).

Principal purpose of a trade union is to regulate relations between workers and employers. Basically, a trade union fights for better working conditions and remuneration for its members. It advocates sound relations between employers and workers through the promotion and protection of freedom of association, collective bargaining agreements and dispute resolution. More specifically, trade unions negotiate for wages, work rules, complaint procedures, rules governing hiring, firing and promotion of workers, benefits, workplace safety and policies. The agreements negotiated by the union leaders are binding on the rank and file members and the employer and in some cases on other non-member workers.

Union members are free to elect their representatives and formulate their work program. They may draw up their own statutes and administrative regulations, as long as these are not contrary to laws in effect and public order.

The unions must get registered with the Ministry by filing their statutes and list of names of those responsible for management and administration. Employer may deduct union dues from the wages of the members only after their written consent. Discriminatory behavior is prohibited by employer on the basis of union affiliation or participation in union activities. Moreover workers are allowed to participate in union activities outside working hours.

No person can discriminate against an employee or a candidate for employment for exercising any right related to trade union membership, participation in trade union activities and leaving the trade union.

No person can require a current or prospective worker to become a member of union or give up trade union membership; prevent a current or prospective worker from exercising any right conferred under the Labour Relations Act; and dismiss or in any way prejudice a current or prospective worker because of past, present or anticipated trade union membership; for participation in the formation or the law full activities of a trade union; for exercising any right conferred under the Labour Relations Act or participating in proceedings specified under the Act or for failing or refusing to do something that an employee may not lawfully permit or require an employer to do.

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

No one can give advantage to a current or prospective worker for not exercising trade union rights however parties can always settle disputes by giving away some of their rights.

The Labour Relations Act 2007 allows for an employee who is above 16 years to join and participate in the activities of a trade union (however cannot become member of trade union executive under the age of 18 years). A voting member of a trade union must be one employed in the sector for which the trade union is registered and his/ her subscriptions must not be more than 13 weeks in arrears.

Source: §41 of the Constitution of Kenya 2010; §4-14 of the Labour Relation Act, 2007

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

In accordance with article 41 of the Constitution, every trade union, employers' organisation and employer has the right to engage in collective bargaining. According to the Labour Relations Act, collective agreement is a written agreement concerning any terms and conditions of employment made between a trade union and an employer, group of employers or organisation of employers.

Every trade union, employers' organisation and employer has the right to engage in collective bargaining. Labour Relations Act allows for collective bargaining in all enterprises.

In order to bargain collectively, employer must agree to the reasonable rules for bargaining and respond to proposals made by the union in a reasonable way. Employer must also provide reasonable resources and information to unions involved in collective bargaining. Persons involved in bargaining have to keep confidential the information provided by the employer.

A collective bargaining agreement must be written and signed by the chief executive officer of any employer, the chief executive or national secretary of an employers' organisation that is a party to the agreement or a representative designated by that person; and the general secretary of any trade union that is a party to the agreement or a representative designated by the general secretary. The agreement is registered with the industrial court and become effective from the date agreed upon by the parties. The terms of the collective agreement are incorporated into the contract of employment of every employee covered by the collective agreement. The term (duration) of a collective agreement is usually for a period of two years.

National Economic and Social Council (NESC) is an advisory body that participates indirectly in Kenya's social dialogue. However, its policy, advice and recommendations seek to provide an objective and favourable environment for engagements between employees, employers, government (executive, legislature and judiciary) and new entrants in the social dialogue space such as NGOs and think tanks. NESC provides advice to government on strategic policies aimed at promoting economic growth, social equity, employment creation, reduction of poverty and inequality.

Right to Strike

Right to strike is recognized by constitution and is a fundamental worker right. Compulsory recourse to arbitration, long and complex conciliation and mediation procedures prior to strike actions generally restrict the right to strike. Strike is prohibited to the workers engaged in essential services.

Strike means the cessation of work by employees acting in combination, or a concerted refusal or a refusal under a common understanding of employees to continue to work for the purpose of compelling their employer or an employers' organisation of which their employer is a member to accede to any demand in respect of a trade dispute.

Peaceful strike is allowed only after all the methods of dispute resolution fail. Members of union must inform the employer and the Ministry of Labour at least 7 days prior to the proposed date of strike. Strikers are not allowed to force other workers to participate in strike and they have the right to return to work without any punishment once the strike is over.

Workers are allowed to participate in protected/legal strike that complies with the provisions of the Act. An employer may not dismiss or take disciplinary action against a worker nor can civil proceedings be instituted against any person for participating in a protected strike or for any conduct in contemplation or furtherance of a protected strike.

Employer is not obliged to pay salaries to the workers on protected strike. Employers also have the right to lockout workers. This right is subject to the same rules and restrictions as the right to strike.

Minimum wage: Convention 131 (1970)

Regular pay & wage protection: Conventions 95 (1949) and 117(1962)

Kenya has ratified the Convention 131 only.

Minimum wage

The minimum wage must cover the living expenses of the employee and his/her family members. Moreover it must relate reasonably to the general level of wages earned and the living standard of other social groups.

Regular Pay

Wages must be paid regularly on a daily, weekly, fortnightly or monthly basis.

02/13 CompensationILO Conventions on Compensation

Compensation overtime: Convention 01 (1919); Night work: Convention 171 (1990)

Kenya has not ratified the Conventions 01 & 171.

Overtime Compensation

Working overtime is to be avoided. Whenever it is unavoidable, extra compensation is at stake - minimally the basic hourly wage plus all additional benefits you are entitled to. In accordance with ILO Convention 1, overtime pay rate should not be less than one and a quarter times (125%) the regular rate.

Night Work Compensation

Night work means all work which is performed during a period of not less than seven (07) consecutive hours, including the interval from midnight to 5 a.m. A night worker is a worker whose work requires performance of a substantial number of hours of night work which exceeds a specified limit (at least 3 hours). Convention 171 requires that night workers be compensated with reduced working time or higher pay or similar benefits. Similar provisions are found in the Night Work Recommendation No. 178 of 1990.

Compensatory Holidays/Rest Days

If you have to work on a national/religious holiday or a weekly rest day, you should be entitled to compensation. Not necessarily in the same week, provided that the right to a paid compensation is not.

Weekend/Public Holiday work Compensation

If you have to work during the weekend, you should thereby acquire the right to a rest period of 24 uninterrupted hours instead. Not necessarily in the weekend, but at least in the course of the following week. Similarly, if you have to work on a public holiday, you must be given a compensatory holiday. A higher rate of pay for working on a public holiday or a weekly rest day does not take your right to a holiday/ rest.

Conventions 14 (1921), 47 (1935) and 106 (1957) for weekly rest days. In addition, for several industries, different Conventions apply.

Kenya has ratified the Conventions 14 & 132 only.

Paid Vacation/Annual Leave

An employee is entitled to at least 21 consecutive paid annual leave. National and religious holidays are not included. Collective agreements must provide at least one day of annual leave on full remuneration for every 17 days on which the employee worked or was entitled to be paid.

Pay on Public Holidays

You should be entitled to paid leave during national and officially recognized public holidays.

Weekly Rest Day

Workers should enjoy a rest period of at least twenty-four consecutive hours in every 7 day period, i.e., a week

04/13 Employment SecurityILO Conventions on employment termination

Convention 158 (1982) on employment termination

Kenya has not ratified the Convention 158.

The questions under this section measure the security or even flexibility or precariousness of an employment relationship. Although these are not clearly mentioned in a single convention (severance pay and notice requirement are provided in the Termination of Employment Convention No. 158) however, the best practices in the field require that employees be provided with a written contract of employment; workers on fixed term contracts should not be hired for tasks of permanent nature; a reasonable probation period (ideally lower than or equal to 6 months) may be followed to assess the suitability of an employee; a period of notice must be specified in an employment contract before severing the employment relationship; and workers be paid severance allowance on termination of employment relationship.

Written Employment Particulars

A contract of employment may be oral or written however workers should be provided with a written statement of employment at the start of their employment.

Fixed Term Contracts

Fixed Term Contract workers must not be hired for permanent tasks as it leads to precarious employment.

Probation Period

A reasonable probation period must be provided to a worker to learn new skills. A newly hired employee may be fired during probation period without any negative consequences.

Notice Requirement

A reasonable notice period, depending on the length of service of an employee, may be required before an employer may sever the employment relationship.

Severance Pay

Employers may be required to pay a severance allowance on termination of employment (due to redundancy or any other reason except for lack of capacity or misconduct).

05/13 Family ResponsibilitiesILO Conventions on family responsibilities

Convention 156: Workers with Family Responsibilities Convention (1981)

Recommendation 165: Workers with Family Responsibilities (1981)

Kenya has not ratified the Conventions 156 & 165.

Paternity Leave

This is for the new fathers around the time of child birth and is usually of shorter duration.

Parental Leave

The accompanying recommendation (No. 165) to ILO Convention on Family Responsibilities provides for parental leave as an option available to either parent to take long leave of absence (paid or unpaid) without resigning from work. Parental leave is usually taken once the maternity and paternity leave have been exhausted. For working parents, laws may define the portion of parental leave that has to be compulsorily taken by fathers or mothers.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance

Recommendation 165 asks for looking into measures for improving general working conditions through flexible work arrangements.

06/13 Maternity and WorkILO Conventions on maternity and work

An earlier Convention (103 from 1952) prescribed at least 12 weeks maternity leave, 6 weeks before and 6 weeks after. However, a later convention (No. 183 from year 2000) requires that maternity leave be at least 14 weeks of which a period of six weeks compulsory leave should be after childbirth.

Kenya has not ratified the Conventions 103 & 183.

Free medical care

During pregnancy and maternity leave, you should be entitled to medical and midwife care without any additional cost.

No harmful work

During pregnancy and while breastfeeding, you should be exempt from work that might bring harm to you or your baby.

Maternity leave

Your maternity leave should last at least 14 weeks.

Income

During maternity leave, your income should amount to at least two thirds of your preceding salary.

Protection from Dismissals

During pregnancy and maternity leave, you should be protected from dismissal or any other discriminatory treatment.

Right to return to same position

Workers have the right to return to same or equivalent position after availing maternity leave.

Breastfeeding/Nursing Breaks

After child birth and your rejoining your organization, you must be allowed paid nursing breaks for breastfeeding your child.

07/13 Health & SafetyILO Conventions on Health and Safety

Most ILO OSH Conventions deal with very specific Occupational Safety hazards, such as asbestos and chemicals.

Convention 155 (1981) is the relevant general convention here. Labour Inspection Convention: 81 (1947)

Kenya has ratified the Convention 81 only.

Employer cares

Your employer, in all fairness, should make sure that the work process is safe.

Free protection

Your employer should provide protective clothing and other necessary safety precautions for free.

Training

In order to ensure workplace safety and health, a central, independent and efficient labour inspection system should be present.

Labour Inspection System

You and your colleagues should receive training in all work related safety and health aspects and you should have been shown the emergency exits.

08/13 Sick Leave & Employment Injury BenefitsILO Conventions on Sickness and Employment Injury

Convention 102 (1952), Conventions 121 (1964) and 130 (1969) concerning Social Security, Employment Injury Benefits and Medical Care and Sickness Benefits

Kenya has not ratified the Conventions 102, 121 & 130.

Income/Paid Sick Leave

Your rights to work and income should be protected when illness strikes. The national labour law may provide that sickness benefit may not be paid during the first 3 days of your absence. Minimally you should be entitled to an income during first 6 months of illness. This income should be at least 45 per cent of the minimum wage. (Countries are free to opt for a system which guarantees 60 per cent of the last wages during the first 6 months of illness or even during the first year). You should be entitled to paid sick leave.

Medical Care

During illness, you should be entitled to medical care without any additional cost. Employees and their family members should have access to the necessary minimal medical care at an affordable cost.

Job security

During the first 6 months of your illness, you should not be fired.

Disability/Work Injury Benefit

Whenever you are disabled due to an occupational disease or accident, you ought to receive a higher benefit. In the case of temporary or total incapacity/disability, a worker may at least be provided 50% of his average wage while in the case of fatal injury, the survivors may be provided with 40% of the deceased worker's average wage in periodical payments.

09/13 Social SecurityILO Conventions on Social Security

Social Security (minimum standards): Convention 102 (1952). For several benefits somewhat higher standards have been set in subsequent Conventions

Employment Injury Benefits: Conventions 121 (1964),

Invalidity, Old age and survivors' benefits: Convention 128(1967)

Medical Care and Sickness Benefits: Convention 130 (1969)

Unemployment Benefits: Convention 168 (1988).

Kenya has not ratified the Convention 102, 121, 128, 130 & 168.

Pension Rights

In the normal circumstances, the pensionable age may not be set higher than 65 years of age. If retirement age is fixed above 65 years, it should give "due regard to the working ability of elderly persons" and "demographic, economic and social criteria, which shall be demonstrated statistically". Pension can be set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Dependent's/Survivors' Benefit

When the breadwinner has died, the spouse and children are entitled to a benefit, expressed as a percentage of the minimum wage, or a percentage of the earned wage. This must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

Unemployment Benefit

For a limited period of time, the unemployed has a right to unemployment benefit set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Invalidity Benefits

Invalidity benefit is provided when a protected person is unable to engage in a gainful employment, before standard retirement age, due to a non-occupational chronic condition resulting in disease, injury or disability. Invalidity Benefit must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

10/13 Fair TreatmentILO Conventions on Fair Treatment

Convention 111 (1958) lists the discrimination grounds which are forbidden.

Convention 100 (1952) is about Equal Remuneration for Work of Equal Value.

Kenya has ratified both Conventions 100 & 111.

Equal Pay

At workplaces equal pay for men and women for work of equal value is a must, regardless of marital status. Pay inequality based on race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction/place of birth or social origin is also forbidden. A transparent remuneration system and the clear matching of pay and position should be in place and to help prevent wage discrimination.

Sexual Harassment

Not clearly provided in ILO Conventions. However, sexual intimidation/harassment is gender discrimination.

Non-Discrimination

Your employer can't discriminate against you on in any aspect of employment (appointment, promotion, training and transfer) on the basis of union membership or participation in union activities, filing of a complaint against an employer, race, colour, sex, marital status, family responsibilities, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, temporary absence due to illness, age, trade union membership, disability/HIV-AIDS, or absence from work during maternity leave. (Conventions 111, 156, 158, 159 and 183)

Equal Choice of Profession

People have the right to work and there can't be occupational segregation on the basis of gender.

11/13 Minors & YouthILO Conventions on Minors & Youth

Minimum Age: Convention 138 (1973)

Worst Forms of Child labour: Convention 182 (1999)

Kenya has ratified both Conventions 138 & 182.

Minimum Age for Employment

At workplaces, children may not be forced to perform work that could harm their health and hampers their physical and mental development.

All children should be able to attend school. Once this is safeguarded, there is no objection against children performing light jobs between the ages of 12 and 14. The general minimum age is 15 years however developing countries may set this at 14 years. The minimum age for hazardous work, work that is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, is 18 years. It can also be set at a lower level of 16 years under certain circumstances

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work

Children should not be employed in a work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children. It is considered one of the worst forms of child labour. The minimum age for such hazardous work is 18 years.

12/13 Forced LabourILO Conventions on Forced/Bonded labour

Forced labour: Conventions 29 (1930)

Abolition of Forced labour: Conventions 105 (1957)

Forced labour is the work one has to perform under threat of punishment: forfeit of wages, dismissal, harassment or violence, even corporal punishment. Forced labour means violation of human rights.

Kenya has ratified both Conventions 29 & 105.

Prohibition on Forced and Compulsory labour

Except for certain exceptions, forced or compulsory labour (exacted under the threat of punishment and for which you may not have offered voluntarily) is prohibited.

Freedom to change jobs and Right to quit

Employers have to allow you to look for work elsewhere. If you do, you should not be shortened on wages or threatened with dismissal. (In the reverse cases, international law considers this as forced labour).

Inhumane Working Conditions

If the total working hours, inclusive of overtime exceed 56 hours per week, the worker is considered to be working under inhumane working conditions.

ILO Conventions on Trade Union Rights

Freedom of association and protection of the right to organize: Convention 87 (1948)

Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining: Convention 98 (1949)

Kenya has ratified the Convention 98 only.

Freedom to join and form a union

Freedom of association means freedom to join a trade union. This is part of the fundamental human rights. Employees may not be put at a disadvantage when they are active in the trade union outside working hours. The list of exclusions for sectors of economic activity and workers in an organization should be short.

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

Trade unions are entitled to negotiate with employers on term of employment without hindrance. The freedom of a trade union to negotiate with employers to try and conclude collective agreements is protected. (The ILO has a special procedure for handling complaints from unions about violation of this principle).

Right to Strike

Workers have the right to strike in order to defend their social and economic interests. It is incidental and corollary to the right to organize provided in ILO convention 87.

About Decent Work and Decent Work Check

Compare your own situation with the international labour standards and how they are applied in Kenya. At the end of the checklist you will see how things stand for you. You may be better off than what the international standards prescribe, but you should not be worse off. Behind every answer, you can find a short explanation of what your rights are; nationally and internationally. So you see right away if you can improve your situation.

The Decent Work Check makes the pretty abstract Conventions and legal texts tangible. Because, in the end, you want to know what your rights on the job mean in practice, what you may claim and what protection you are entitled to in case something unexpectedly does go wrong. The Decent Work Check employs double comparison system. It first compares national laws with international labour standards and gives a score to the national situation (happy or sad face). It allows workers to compare their real situation with national regulations in the country. Workers then compare their own score both at national and international levels. The Decent Work Check is based on de jure labour provisions, as found in the labour legislation. The real practice is informed by the employees themselves. This Check is different from other indices like World Bank's Doing Business Indicators or even ISSA's Social Security Programs throughout the World as it is not only descriptive in nature (bereft of any subjective opinions) but also that it covers a lot of different variables. The Revised Decent Work Check is also designed while taking into account upcoming Decent Work Indicators. While Decent Work Indicators focus more on statistics, our priority is informing workers about their rights through this Decent Work Check. Decent Work Check is useful both for employees and employers. It gives them knowledge, which is the first step towards any improvement. It informs employees of their rights at the workplace while simultaneously enlightening employers about their obligations. Decent Work Check is also useful for researchers, labour rights organizations conducting surveys on the situation of rights at work and general public wanting to know more about the world of work.

WageIndicator teams, around the world, have found out that workers, small employers and labour inspectors don't even know the labour law.

When you are informed - being a workers, self-employed, employee, employer, policy maker, labour inspector - there is a greater possibility that you ask for your rights (as a worker), you comply with rules (as an employer) and you strive to enforce these (as a labour inspector). As soon as you complete the DecentWorkCheck, you see which issues need improvement in your work life.

This is exactly the strategy chosen in the debates in many WageIndicator countries. In the debates with roughly 20-30 people around the table from all sides, the decent Work Check has soon the effect of a mini social dialogue. The people who run the dialogue are equally well informed.

The international labour standards are laid down in ILO-Conventions. ILO is the specialised body of the United Nations working on labour issues and was founded in 1919. In the ILO, negotiations are always going on between governments of the member states, national trade unions and employers associations regarding work related issues like rights at work and social protection. These negotiations may take years, but eventually lead to so called Conventions or Recommendations. In Conventions, minimum standards are laid down. Conventions are not the law, but the intention is that member states subscribe to the standard in question. The proper way to do that is to have these Conventions ratified by parliament and then make national laws (Some countries may follow the system of self-executing treaties). National law can be enforced. ILO-Conventions are usually accompanied by Recommendations on how to implement the standards.

Since 1999, the ILO works according to the so called Decent Work Agenda. In the meantime, the Decent Work Agenda has been widely accepted as an important strategy to fight poverty and foster development. The Agenda has been incorporated in the Millennium Development Goals of the United Nations. In short, the idea behind Decent Work is first of all an income which allows the working individual a good life. Moreover, at work, everybody has an equal chance to develop themselves; working conditions are safe; there is no instance of child and forced/bonded labour; and discrimination does not occur. Trade unions are allowed a real say in work related matters and the state has created a social safety net for all especially for the sick, weak, elderly and expecting women.
