WageIndicator Foundation - www.wageindicator.org

WageIndicator started in 2001 to contribute to a more transparent labour market for workers and employers by publishing easily accessible information on a website. It collects, compares and shares labour market information through online and face-to-face surveys and desk research. It publishes the collected information on national websites, thereby serving as an online library for wage information, labour law, and career advice, both for workers/employees and employers. The WageIndicator websites and related communication activities reach out to millions of people on a monthly basis. The WageIndicator concept is owned by the independent, non-profit WageIndicator Foundation, established in 2003. The Foundation has offices in Amsterdam (HQ), Ahmedabad, Bratislava, Buenos Aires, Cape Town, Islamabad and Venice.

Many people contributed to the development of the Decent Work Check as a tool and to this Check for Malaysia. Those who contributed to the development of tool include Paulien Osse, Kea Tijdens, Dirk Dragstra, Leontine Bijleveld, Egidio G. Vaz Raposo and Lorena Ponce De Leon. Iftikhar Ahmad later expanded the work to new topics in 2012-13 and made the work more legally robust. Daniela Ceccon, Huub Bouma, and Gunjan Pandya have supported the work by bringing it online through building and operating labour law database and linking it to the WageIndicator websites. Special thanks are due to the WageIndicator Pakistan office (headed by Iftikhar Ahmad), which works on Decent Work Checks since 2012.

Minimum Wage Database and Labour Law Database are maintained by the Centre for Labour Research which works as WageIndicator Pakistan office. The team currently comprises Iftikhar Ahmad (team lead), Ayesha Kiran, Ayesha Mir, Nadia Shah, Sehrish Irfan, Shabana Malik, Shaista Batool, Shanzay Sohail, and Zainab Jamil. Ashikin, co-author, contributed both to the English version and translated the Decent Work Check to Malay.

DECENT WORK QUESTIONNAIRE ............................................................................. 56
INTRODUCTION

Decent Work is the type of work for which all of us aspire. It is done under conditions where people are gainfully employed (and there exist adequate income and employment opportunities); social protection system (labour protection and social security) is fully developed and accessible to all; social dialogue and tripartism are promoted and encouraged; and rights at work, as specified in ILO Declaration on Fundamental principles and Rights at Work and Core ILO Conventions, are practiced, promoted and respected.

WageIndicator Foundation has been working, since late 2007, to raise awareness on workplace rights through a unique tool, i.e., Decent Work Check. The Decent Work Check considers different work aspects, which are deemed important in attaining "decent work". The work makes the rather abstract Conventions and legal texts tangible and measurable in practice.

The Decent Work Check employs a double comparison system. It first compares national laws with international labour standards and gives a score to the national regulations (happy or sad face). If national regulations in a country are not consistent with ILO conventions, it receives a sad face and its score decreases (and vice versa). It then allows workers to compare their on-ground situation with national regulations. Workers can compare their own score with national score and see whether their working conditions are consistent with national and international labour standards. The Check is based on de jure labour provisions, as found in the labour legislation.

Decent Work Check is useful both for employees and employers. It gives them knowledge, which is the first step towards any improvement. It informs employees of their rights at the workplace while simultaneously enlightening employers about their obligations. Decent Work Check is also useful for researchers, labour rights organizations conducting surveys on the situation of rights at work and general public wanting to know more about the world of work. WageIndicator teams, around the world, have found out that workers, small employers and even labour inspectors are not, sometimes, fully aware of the labour law. When you are informed - being a workers, self-employed, employee, employer, policy maker, labour inspector - there is a greater possibility that you ask for your rights (as a worker), you comply with rules (as an employer) and you strive to enforce these (as a labour inspector).

The work is relevant to the challenges posed to the future of work especially the effective enforcement of legislation in financially constrained states, rise of precarious employment and measuring the impact of regulatory regimes.

Currently, there are more than 100 countries for which a Decent Work Check is available here: www.decentworkcheck.org During 2020, the team aims to include at least 10 more countries, thus taking the number of countries with a Decent Work Check to 115!

Minimum wage: Convention 131 (1970)
Regular pay & wage protection: Conventions 95 (1949) and 117(1962)

Malaysia has ratified the Conventions 95 & 131 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The minimum wage must cover the living expenses of the employee and his/her family members. Moreover, it must relate reasonably to the general level of wages earned and the living standard of other social groups. Wages must be paid regularly on a daily, weekly, fortnightly or monthly basis.
Regulations on work and wages:
- Minimum Wages Order 2012
- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)

Minimum Wage

The main legislation relates to minimum wages in Malaysia are National Wages Consultative Council Act 2011[Act 732], Minimum Wages Order 2020.

Malaysia’s minimum wages policy is decided under the National Wages Consultative Council Act 2011 (Act 732). There is a tripartite body known as the National Wages Consultative Council which is formed to recommend the minimum wages rate to the Government and once approved by the Government, the Minister of Human Resources makes a Minimum Wages Order.

The criteria to decide minimum wages are divided into two; base and adjustment criteria. Base criteria include Poverty Line Income (PLI) and Median Wage while the adjustment criteria include changes in Consumer Price Index (CPI), Productivity Growth (P) and Real Unemployment Rate (UE).

Regardless of the constant changes of minimum wages, the penalties for the offences are:

Regular Pay

There are several legal definitions of the word wages under the written laws.

Wages are defined under the Employment Act 1955 as “basic wages and all other payments in cash payable to an employee for work done in respect of his contract of service”. Certain exclusions are applicable like wages do not include value of any house accommodation, travelling allowance, gratuity, annual bonus, etc. Wages have different meanings under different Acts and thus a different explanation of wages is found under §2 of Employees Provident Fund Act 1991.

Wages have different scope under different sections of the Employment Act 1955 where basically it means basic wages and all other payments in cash payable to an employee for work done in respect of his contract of service. The word wages have different references and purposes under the Employment Act 1955:

*For the above table, wages refer to any payment to an employee excluding the X marked box for each section.

The Employment Act 1955 also has stated some rules and laws on the payment of wages. The Act specifyes that a wage period cannot exceed one month and even when the employment contract (referred to as contract of service under the law) does not specify the wage period, it is deemed to be one month. The laws allow employers to pay 7 days after the last day of the wage period and any wages for work done on rest day, public holiday and overtime may be payable not later than the last day of the next wage period. If the Director General of Labour is convinced that payment within such time is not reasonably practicable, he may, on the application of the employer, extend the time of payment by such number of days as he thinks fit.

When a fixed term contract of service expires or when a contract of service for an unspecified term is terminated due to notice by either party, the wages must be paid not later than the day on which the contract is terminated. The wages also shall be paid on the last date of employment if employer terminates the contract by paying salary in lieu of notice, breach of contract by employee or dismissal for misconduct. Meanwhile, if the contract is terminated by the employee by paying salary in lieu of notice, without notice due to breach of contract and when the dependants have been exposed to violence or disease that is not stated in the contract, the wages shall be paid not later than the third day after the termination.

Meanwhile for the payment of wages, there are few periods of pay that shall be applicable in different circumstances upon the termination of contract:

Employment Act has detailed instructions on deductions from workers’ wages. It sets a general rule that no deductions can be made by an employer from the wages of an employee otherwise than in accordance with Employment Act. It then lists out the conditions when an employer can make lawful deductions (deductions for overpayment, deductions for indemnity due to employer, deductions for recovery of advance without interest) and the certain conditions of deductions that shall not or shall be made except with the request in 7 days writing of the employee (payments to a registered trade union, payment for any shares of employer’s business) or the Director General (payments into any superannuation or worker welfare scheme, payments for recovery of advance with interest, payments for accommodation and food, etc.).

In general, the employer is not allowed to make deductions from employee’s wages. The exceptions are lawful deductions and at the request of employee upon approval of the DGL. In particular we are referring to:

<thead>
<tr>

</tr>
</tbody>

Other than the mentioned deductions, employers can only do deductions if the employer makes an application to the DGL and approval has been obtained. The law states that the amount of deduction in one month should not be more than 50% of the wages in that month.

An employer is only allowed to give a loan of more than one month’s salary if it involves:

a) Purchasing, building, renovating a house/land
b) Purchasing a car, motorcycle or bicycle
c) Purchasing shares of employer’s business
d) Enabling employees to purchase a computer

e) Payments of employee’s/ immediate family member’s medical expenses
f) Payments of daily expenses pending receipt of temporary disablement under SOCSO’s Act
g) Payment for educational expenses for self or immediate family member.

Employers are required to provide a wage slip to every employee (relating to details of wages and other allowances earned during each wage period as specified in Employment Regulations 1957) on or before the date of payment of wages.

ILO Conventions

Compensation overtime: Convention 01 (1919)
Night work: Convention 171 (1990)

Malaysia has not ratified the above-mentioned Conventions.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Working overtime is to be avoided. Whenever it is unavoidable, extra compensation is at stake - minimally the basic hourly wage plus all additional benefits you are entitled to. In accordance with ILO Convention 1, overtime pay rate should not be less than one and a quarter times (125%) the regular rate.

Night work means all work which is performed during a period of not less than seven (07) consecutive hours, including the interval from midnight to 5 a.m. A night worker is a worker whose work requires performance of a substantial number of hours of night work which exceeds a specified limit (at least 3 hours). Convention 171 requires that night workers be compensated with reduced working time or higher pay or similar benefits. Similar provisions are found in the Night Work Recommendation No. 178 of 1990.

If a worker has to work on a national/religious holiday or a weekly rest day, he/she should be entitled to compensation. Not necessarily in the same week, provided that the right to a paid compensation is not.

If a worker has to work during the weekend, he/she should thereby acquire the right to a rest period of 24 uninterrupted hours instead. Not necessarily in the weekend, but at least in the course of the following week. Similarly, if a worker has to work on a public holiday, he/she must be given a compensatory holiday. A higher rate of pay for working on a public holiday or a weekly rest day does not take away the right to a holiday/ rest.
Regulations on compensation:
- Employment Act 1955(Act 265)
- Employment (Limitation of Overtime Work) Regulations 1980
- Children and Young Persons (Employment) Act 1966(Act 350)

Overtime Compensation

Hours of work refers to the time during an employee is at the disposal of the employer and not free to dispose of self-own time and movements. The hours of work has a concept of 5-8-10-48 hours where an employee should not be required under his contract of service to work within the limits stated by the law in regard to the normal hours of work:

a) 5 consecutive hours of work
   An employee shall be on break for at least for 30 minutes during his normal working hours after five consecutive hours of work unless it involves an employee whose attendance is required to be at work at all time provided he receives 45 minutes meal break at the place of work. For example, a night watchman/boiler-man

b) 8 hours a day
   The maximum number of normal hours of work in a day excluding meal-break is 8 hours. If employee is not allowed to leave and re-enter the work place during the meal-break period let say 1 hour, then the 1 hour break is not considered as working hours. Some employers also exceed this rule provided that the total for the week is not exceeding 48 hours.

c) Spread over period of 10 hours
   This is in reference to the total number of hours from the time employee commences work until he ends his normal hours work including any break within this period. For example, a waitress in a hotel is on duty from 11 am where she is on duty to serve lunch till 3 pm and followed by a four-hour break which later she resumes work from 7 pm to 11 pm to serve dinner. The law doesn’t consider her to be entitled for 12 hours of work but 10 hours of work and 2 hours of overtime even though she works for only 8 hours with 4 hours of break.

d) 48 hours/week
   This generally talks about the limit of work is 48 hours per week and the only exceptions are upon approval from the DGL with any conditions that he deems necessary and for employees who are shift workers.

Other than that, an employee may also works exceeding the limits in the following circumstances:

a) An accident/likelyhood of accident in the workplace
b) Work, performance that is essential to the life of community ie, TNB,Syabas
c) Work, performance essential to the defence/security of Malaysia
d) Urgent work to machinery/plant
e) Unforeseen interruption of work that requires stay back and completion of work
f) Work, performances in any industrial undertaking essential to the economy of Malaysia / as defined in the First Schedule IRA; banking services, electricity services, postal services, production, refining, storage, supply and distribution of fuel and lubricants, public health service, radio communication services, water services, business or industries relates to defence and security in Malaysia.

g) Application to the DGL and subject to conditions that he may imposed and feels necessary.

h) Employees who engage in “long hours of inactive or standby employment”. For example, a driver for CEO may start his day from 8 am and ends at 8 pm but within the 12 hours, he is not really active and has to wait for some time, then the exceeding rules previously mentioned at the above are not applicable to this driver.

Overtime is defined as the number of hours of work carried out in excess of the normal hours of work per day. Normal hours of work is defined as the number of hours of work provided for in the contract of service to be the usual hours of work per day. Hence, if an employee agrees to change his working times, it doesn’t mean he is automatically entitled for overtime if he comes back one hour later than the time stated in his initial contract of service as the hours of work in a day is still the same. The rate for overtime is as follow:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Days</th>
<th>Rates</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Working days/Non-working days other than the listed below:</td>
<td>1.5 x HRP</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>a) Rest Day</td>
<td>2 x HRP</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>b) Public holiday</td>
<td>3 x HRP</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The employer is prohibited from allowing employee to work overtime in excess of the limit of 104 hours per month where the work done on rest day, public holiday, day that substituted public holiday will not be considered to be part of this amount.

Working hours of children and adolescents are determined through Children and Young Persons (Employment) Act 1966 (Act 350). A child (under 15 years) is not allowed to work more than 6 hours per day. If he/she is attending school, the total number of hours spent at school and work should not exceed seven hours per day. Young persons (under the age of 18 years) cannot work for more than seven hours per day. In case they are attending school, the total number of hours spent at school and work should not exceed eight hours per day.

Night Work Compensation

No provisions could be located on night work and its compensation under the Malaysian labour law.

Compensatory Holidays / Rest Days

Employment Act has provisions on compensatory holiday if a worker is engaged to work on a public holiday. By an agreement between the worker and employer, any other day or days may be substituted for one or more of the six gazetted public holidays which means that substitution is not possible for five compulsory public holidays provided under the Employment Act 1955.

Where any of gazetted public holidays or any other substituted day falls within the period during which an employee is on sick leave or annual leave to which the employee is entitled under this Act, or falls during the period of temporary disablement under the Workmen's Compensation Act 1952, or under the Employees Social Security Act 1969, employer has to grant another day as a paid holiday in substitution for such public holiday or the day substituted therefore.

No such provisions on compensatory or substitute holidays could be located if workers have to work on weekly rest days.

Source: §60D of the Employment Act 1955(Act 265)

Weekend / Public Holiday Work Compensation

Employment Act has provisions on monetary compensatory if a worker is engaged to work on a public holiday or a weekly rest day.

Working on a Rest Day

If a worker is employed on an hourly, daily or other similar rate of pay and has to work on a rest day, he is paid (at the ordinary rate of pay) as follows:
   i. One day’s wages if he works for less than half of his daily normal hours of work; and
   ii. Two days’ wages if he works for more than half but less than his total daily normal hours of work.

If a worker is employed on monthly rate of pay and has to work on a rest day, he is paid (at the ordinary rate of pay) as follows:
   i. Half day’s wages if he works for less than half of his daily normal hours of work; and
   ii. One day’s wages if he works for more than half but less than his total daily normal hours of work.

If the work is carried out in excess of normal hours of work on a rest day, the worker is paid at a rate which is not less than two times his hourly rate of pay. In the case of an employee employed on piece rate, he/she is paid twice ordinary rate per piece for working on a rest day.
Working on a Public Holiday

If a worker is required to work on a public holiday, he is paid extra amount in addition to the holiday pay for that day and even if the period of work is less than his normal daily hours of work. The amount is as follows (paid at the ordinary rate of pay):

i. Two days’ wages if paid at hourly, daily, weekly, monthly or other similar rate; or

ii. Twice the (ordinary) rate per piece if paid at piece rate

If a worker is made to work on a public holiday and works in excess of his daily normal hours of work, he/she is paid as follows (paid at the ordinary rate of pay):

i. At least three times his hourly rate of pay if paid at hourly, daily, weekly, monthly or other similar rate; or

ii. thrice the (ordinary) rate per piece if paid at piece rate

Employee who works on a rest day or a public holiday, then he or she is entitled for the followings:

ILO Conventions

Convention 132 (1970) on Holidays with Pay Convention Conventions 14 (1921), 47 (1935) and 106 (1957) for weekly rest days. In addition, for several industries, different Conventions apply.

Malaysia has not ratified the above-mentioned Conventions.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

An employee is entitled to at least 21 consecutive days of paid annual leave. National and religious holidays are not included. Collective agreements must provide at least one day of annual leave on full remuneration for every 17 days on which the employee worked or was entitled to be paid.

A worker should be entitled to paid leave during national and officially recognized public holidays.

Workers should enjoy a rest period of at least twenty-four consecutive hours in every 7-day period, i.e., a week
Regulations on annual leave and holidays:
- Employment Act 1955(Act 265)
- Holiday Act 1951(Act 396)

Paid Vacation / Annual Leave

Annual leave (paid by the employer at ordinary rate of pay for everyday of annual leave) is provided under the Employment Act and it ranges from 8 calendar days to 16 calendar days depending on the length of service. A worker must have completed 12 months of continuous service with the employer for entitlement to annual leave or else it would be pro-rated, in direct proportion to the number of completed months in service. An employee who has completed twelve months of service is entitled to paid annual leave of:

i. 8 calendar days if length of employment is less than two years;
ii. 12 calendar days if employee has worked for two or more years but less than five years;
iii. 16 calendar days if the length of employment is five years or more;

A worker is not entitled to leave if he has absented himself from work without the permission of his employer and without reasonable excuse for more than 10% of the working days during the preceding 12 months.

If an employee is entitled for sick leave or maternity leave while on annual leave, then the annual leave is deemed not to have been during the period of such leave. It means that if an employee is on annual leave for 5 days and suddenly gets sick leave for 3 days, then the employee has utilized his 2 days of annual leave and 3 days of sick leave.

When either party has serves notice period, then the employee is entitled to take all the annual leave that he is entitled to during the notice period. If the contract of service is terminated before the employee has utilized his annual leave, then such leave will be paid to him with a value of ORP for each annual leave. Regardless of this, an employee will not be entitled for annual leave if the employee is being dismissed for misconduct.

While if the employee is on unpaid leave for a period of time that is more than 30 days, then such period of unpaid leave should be disregarded in computing the length of service for his annual leave entitlement.

Pay on Public Holidays

Every employee is entitled for a minimum of 11 days of public holiday where usually the company exhibits at the workplace a notice before 1st January of each year. The types of public holiday that an employee is entitled to is:

a) Mandatory public holidays which means that these compulsory holidays are non-substitutable and if an employee is required to work on any of these 5 days, then he will be paid the holiday rate of pay in the previous notes before. For an employee who works at different states/district in Malaysia will be entitled to the holiday in the state in which he wholly or mainly works. The 5 mandatories are National Day, Birthday of Yang di-Pertuan Agong, Birthday of the Ruler or Yang di-Pertuan Negeri, Workers’ Day and Malaysia Day.

b) Any other holidays that the Company chooses to observe which it has to be 6 in total or more.

c) Sudden declared holiday by the Federal. The Company observes this holiday and if the company chooses to operate on this sudden declared holiday, then there shall be a substitution holiday or pay in lieu of holiday.

d) Sudden declared holiday by the State. The Company observes this holiday if the Company chooses to observe all gazetted public holidays. If the Company doesn’t observe all gazette public holiday within the state, then it depends on the Company to apply discretion to observe such holidays.

If the observed public holidays at a workplace fall on the rest day, another public holiday, then the next working day shall be the public holiday in substitution. If let say, the Malaysia Day falls on Sunday for a normal office worker, then the next working day which is Monday shall be a substitution holiday but if it falls on Saturday, then there shall be no substitution holiday.

The law states that if an employee is absent without leave or reasonable excuse on the working day immediately before or after a public holiday, then the employee is not entitled to any holiday pay for that holiday.

Weekly Rest Days

Every employee should be given in each week one rest day which the employer may be decided so and depends on the operational needs of the company.

If there is more than one rest day, then the last of such rest day is the official rest day. Meanwhile for shift employee, a continuous period of thirty hours shall constitute a rest day. If there is work done on the last day of official rest day or within the period of thirty hours, then there shall be rest day pay for the employee according to the abovementioned rate.
There will be certain situations where the employer requires employee to work on 7 consecutive days and in such cases, then an application to get an exemption shall be made to the DGL.

ILO Conventions

Convention 158 (1982) on employment termination

Malaysia has not ratified the Convention 158.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

The questions under this section measure the security or even flexibility or precariousness of an employment relationship. Although these are not clearly mentioned in a single convention (severance pay and notice requirement are provided in the Termination of Employment Convention No. 158) however, the best practices in the field require that employees be provided with a written contract of employment; workers on fixed term contracts should not be hired for tasks of permanent nature; a reasonable probation period (ideally lower than or equal to 6 months) may be followed to assess the suitability of an employee; a period of notice must be specified in an employment contract before severing the employment relationship; and workers be paid severance allowance on termination of employment relationship.

A contract of employment may be oral or written however workers should be provided with a written statement of employment at the start of their employment.

Fixed Term Contract workers must not be hired for permanent tasks as it leads to precarious employment.

A reasonable probation period must be allowed to let a worker learn new skills. A newly hired employee may be fired during probation period without any negative consequences.

A reasonable notice period, depending on the length of service of an employee, may be required before an employer may sever the employment relationship.

Employers may be required to pay a severance allowance on termination of employment (due to redundancy or any other reason except for lack of capacity or misconduct).
Regulations on employment security:

- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)
- Industrial Relations Act 1967 (Act 177)
- Employment (Termination and Lay-off Benefits) Regulations 1990

Written Employment Particulars

Employment Act 1955 has provisions on employment contracts (referred to as contract of service). The Act defines a contract of service as “any agreement, whether oral or in writing and whether express or implied, whereby one person agrees to employ another as an employee and that the other agrees to serve his employer as his employee and includes an apprenticeship contract”. Similar definition is found in Industrial Relations Act 1967. Thus, a contract of service can be in writing, oral, express or implied.

The Employment Act provides that employment contracts lasting for more than one month must be in writing and that employment contracts must include a provision for termination. However, the lack of a written contract does not invalidate the employment relationship. The Act requires an employer to prepare and keep register(s) containing such information regarding each employee employed by him as prescribed under a Regulation. Every employment particular, recorded in a register, must be preserved in such a way so that it is available for inspection for at least six years after its recording. The employer may keep the particulars in a register or electronic records upon approval of DGL.

Personal Data Protection Act 2010 also requires employers to provide specific information in writing to employees.

Fixed Term Contracts

Employment Act has provisions on fixed term and indefinite term contracts. S 11 of the Act reads as under:

1) A contract of services for a specified period of time or for the performance of a specified piece of work shall, unless otherwise terminated in accordance with this part, terminate when the period of time for which such contract was made has expired or when the piece of work specified in such contract has been completed.”

2) A contract of service for an unspecified period of time shall continue in force until terminated in accordance with this Part.

The above text talks about contracts for a specified period of time which are generally referred to as fixed term contracts. Usually, the reasons for hiring employees on fixed term contracts are because they are needed for certain specific period of time or for specific project that has an expiration period later. The total term of such contracts

The text in this document was last updated in February 2020. For the most recent and updated text on Employment & Labour Legislation in Malaysia in Malay, please refer to: https://gajimu.my including renewals within 30 days and extensions are the usual period that the Court will consider as years of services in making any unlawful termination cases.

There is a possibility for a permanent employment to be disguised as a fixed term contract. In recognizing fixed term contract, it is important to identify the genuineness of the contract as it is agreed by both parties that such contract will not be renewed generally. Examples of genuine fixed term contracts include “seasonal work, work to fill gaps by temporary absence of permanent staff, training and performance of specific tasks such as a research project funded from outside the employer’s undertaking”. These are the type of contracts envisaged under the Employment Act (Section 11) Case law suggests that if an employee renews the contract continuously then the contract will be deemed as permanent contract which means that the employee will be entitled to all the same benefits as other permanent employees within the same Company.

Probation Period

There is no specific legal provision on probation or trial period. The Employment Act does not distinguish between an employee under probation and other employees. Such employee who is under probation enjoys all the same rights as any other confirmed/permanent employee unless stated otherwise in the handbook or terms and conditions of the Company.

Though there is no specific provision on probation period, it is common practice for the probationary periods to vary between 3 months (non-executive positions) to 6 months (executive and managerial positions). Maximum length of probation period is not provided under the Employment Act or Case Law. A probationer continues to be a probationer event at the expiration of the probationary period unless the Company confirms the position preferably with a confirmation letter. However, an employee on probation enjoys the same rights as a permanent or confirmed employee and his/her services cannot be terminated without just cause or excuse.

Notice Requirement

Notice period is regulated under the Employment Act 1955 and contract of service. An employment contract can be terminated by either party, at any time, by giving the other party a notice of his intention to terminate such contract. Notice period can be determined under the contract of service (thus in writing) and its length is essentially the same for worker and employer. If the notice period is not determined in writing in the contract of service, the minimum notice period (as provided under Employment Act), must be followed:

i. Four weeks if length of employment is less than two years;
ii. Six weeks if employee has worked for two or more years but less than five years; and
iii. Eight weeks if the length of employment is five years or more

Notice is served in written form and if the party who serves it chooses to pay the in lieu of notice, then the party who receive it may not refuse it without any valid reasons. Under the law, the party who receives the notice may waive its right to notice.

Employment Act allows contract termination without notice in the following cases:

i. Contract termination by either party in the event of wilful breach of a condition of contract by other party;

ii. Summary dismissal on the grounds of misconduct inconsistent with the fulfilment of the express or implied conditions of his service;

iii. Contract termination who has been continuously absent from work (for more than two days) without prior leave from employer (unless there is a reasonable excuse)

iv. Contract termination by the worker where he or his dependants are immediately threatened by danger to the person by violence or disease such as such employee did not by his contract of service undertake to run

v. If the employee committed sexual harassment and the case was proved and decided by the Director General

Severance Pay

The legal provision on severance pay (referred to as termination benefits) are found in the Employment (Termination and Lay-Off Benefits) Regulations 1980. An employer is liable to pay termination or lay-off as specified below to an employee (who has been employed for at least one year) if the contract of service has been terminated or the employee is laid off. This regulation emphasis on the need to pay termination benefits for an employee who has been employed under a continuous contract of service for more than one year where continuous contract of service refers to uninterrupted service with an employer and such periods include two or more terms which only took less than 30 days of gap. An employee is entitled to termination benefit when his employment is terminated except in the following cases:

i. If employment is terminated by employer upon the employee attaining the age of retirement (60 years) if the contract of service contract has stipulation in that regard;

ii. If the employment is terminated by employer on the grounds of misconduct after due inquiry;

iii. If the employment is terminated by employee voluntarily except for the cases specified under the Act (on willful breach of contractual terms by the employer or he or his dependents are immediately threatened by danger to the person by violence or disease);
iv. If the contract of service for a worker is renewed or if the worker is re-engaged by the same employer under a new contract whose terms are not less favorable and the renewal or re-engagement takes effect immediately on the ending of his employment under the previous contract.

v. Not less than 7 days before the date with effect from which his services are to be terminated, the employer offered to renew his contract of service or to reengage him under a new contract.

vi. An employee leaves the service of his employer before the expiration of any notice given to him by his employer.

Lay-off benefits are payable if a worker is laid off which happens if the employer does not provide work to the worker for at least a total 12 normal working days within any period of four consecutive weeks and the employee is not entitled to any remuneration under the contract for the period (or periods) in which he is not provided with the work.

Payment of termination benefits must be in accordance with contract of service however the minimum is prescribed under Employment (Termination and Lay-off Benefits) Regulations 1980. Minimum termination and lay-off benefits are payable on the following rates, depending on the length of service:

i. 10 days’ wages for each year of service if the employee has worked less than two years;

ii. 15 days’ wages for each year of service if the employee has worked for two years but less than five years; and

iii. 20 days’ wages for each year of service if the employee has worked for five or more years.

The termination benefits are calculated through this formula:

\[(\text{Average True Day Wages: Last 12 months’ wages}/365 \text{ days}) \times \text{service period, i.e., No. of years of service}} \times (\text{Eligibility, i.e., } 10/15/20 \text{ days})\]

Other than termination benefits, a worker is entitled to following in the event of contract termination:

i. Payment in lieu of notice;

ii. Payment in lieu of annual leave balance and accrued leave during the year; and

iii. Balance of salaries

ILO Conventions

Convention 156: Workers with Family Responsibilities Convention (1981)
Recommendation 165: Workers with Family Responsibilities (1981)

Malaysia has not ratified the Convention 156.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

Paternity leave is for the new fathers around the time of childbirth and is usually of shorter duration.

Recommendation (No. 165) provides for parental leave as an option available to either parent to take long leave of absence (paid or unpaid) without resigning from work. Parental leave is usually taken once the maternity and paternity leave have been exhausted. For working parents, laws may define the portion of parental leave that has to be compulsorily taken by fathers or mothers.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance Recommendation 165 asks the employers to look into the measures for improving general working conditions through flexible work arrangements.
Regulations on family responsibilities:

Paternity Leave

There is no provision on paternity leave in Employment Act or any other labour law. It depends on the company policy to provide such leave, usually ranging between 1-3 days, or require new fathers to take unpaid leave or use (part of) annual leave as additional time off. Malaysian civil servants are entitled to seven days of paternity leave while some state government employees can take up to 14 days of paternity leave.

Parental Leave

The term parental leave doesn’t exist in Malaysian legislation. Thus, the law is silent on it and depends on the company policy.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance

The law doesn’t have specific provisions on the topic for flexible work options for parents with minor children.

A draft amendment in the Employment Act, to be tabled in the Parliament in 2019, plans to allow workers to have “flexible working arrangements”. The proposed amendment requires the employers to favourably consider an employee’s request for flexible work arrangement unless such facility leads to additional costs for the employer, or has an impact on performance or quality or where employer cannot reorganize work among its workforce or is unable to recruit an additional worker.
ILO Conventions

An earlier Convention (103 from 1952) prescribed at least 12 weeks maternity leave, 6 weeks before and 6 weeks after birth. However, a later convention (No. 183 from year 2000) requires that maternity leave be at least 14 weeks of which a period of six weeks compulsory leave should be after childbirth.

Malaysia has not ratified the Conventions 103 & 183.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be entitled to medical and midwife care without any additional cost.

During pregnancy and while breastfeeding, a worker should be exempt from work that might bring harm to you or your baby.

The total maternity leave should last at least 14 weeks.

During maternity leave, a worker’s income should amount to at least two thirds of your preceding salary.

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be protected from dismissal or any other discriminatory treatment.

Workers have the right to return to same or equivalent position after availing maternity leave.

After childbirth and on re-joining work, a worker must be allowed paid nursing breaks for breast-feeding the child.
Regulations on maternity and work:
- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)
- Employment (Minimum rate of maternity allowance) Regulations 1976

Free Medical Care

The law doesn’t require an employer to provide free medical care to pregnant workers. It is just a matter of practice within the industry to attract employees and usually Company pays insurance that include maternity care for the employee and health care for the immediate family.

No Harmful Work

Employment Act 1995 restricts women from working at night (between the hours of ten o’clock in the evening and five o’clock in the morning) and underground work. However, these restrictions are applicable generally are not specific to pregnant workers. The Employment Act allows the Minister to prohibit or permit employment of female employees in such circumstances or under such conditions through an Order.

Maternity Leave

Maternity leave is provided under the Employment Act 1955 for a period of at least 60 consecutive days. The maternity leave may not commence earlier than 30 days prior to the expected date of confinement or later than the day immediately following confinement.

If a medical officer or a registered medical practitioner (appointed by the employer) certifies that the pregnant worker, as a result of advanced stage of pregnancy, is unable to perform duties satisfactorily, she may be required to commence her maternity leave at any time during a period of 14 days preceding to the date of confinement. If a pregnant worker abstains from work to commence her maternity leave on a date earlier than 30 days prior to confinement, it is not treated as maternity leave and she is not entitled to any maternity allowance for those days.

A worker who is entitled to maternity leave but not to maternity allowance may, with employer’s consent, commence work at any time during the eligible period (of 60 days) if she is certified fit to resume work by a registered medical practitioner.

Any condition in a contract of service whereby an employee relinquishes or is deemed to relinquish any right (with regard to maternity leave or maternity allowance) is void.

Source: Sections 37 & 43 of the Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)
Income

Employment Act 1995 has provision on maternity allowance for a period of at least 60 consecutive days. While every female pregnant worker is entitled to maternity leave, maternity allowance has separate conditions as follows:

i. The worker must have five or less surviving natural children, where as children are defined as natural children irrespective of age, adopted children and step children are not taken into account.
ii. The worker must have been employed by the employer for a period of, or as an aggregate, at least 90 days during the 9 months immediately before confinement iii. and must have been employed by the employer at any time in 4 months immediately before her confinement.

A female employee must, within a period of sixty days immediately preceding her expected confinement, notify her employer of it and the date from which she intends to commence her maternity leave. If she commences such leave without so notifying her employer, the payment of maternity allowance to her may be suspended until such notice is given to her employer.

The failure to give any such notice within the period specified does not prejudice the right of a female employee to receive any maternity allowance it is found that the failure was caused by mistake or other reasonable cause.

The maternity allowance is based on the monthly wages if a worker is employed on monthly rate of pay. Otherwise, a worker is entitled to receive her ordinary rate of pay for each day of the eligible period of maternity allowance or at the rate prescribed by the Minister, whichever is higher. The minimum prescribed daily rate is MYR 6

If a female worker dies from any cause during the eligible period (of 60 days), employer is required to pay maternity allowance to the nominee or legal representative from the day of commencement of maternity leave to the day immediately preceding her death.

Source: Sections 37-44A of the Employment Act 1955 (Act 265); Employment (Minimum rate of maternity allowance) Regulations 1976

Protection from Dismissals

Employment of a worker is secure during the term of maternity leave. An employer who terminates the services of a female worker during maternity leave commits an offence unless the termination is based on the ground of closure of employer’s business.

The restriction on dismissal extends to 90 days after expiration of the eligible period of 60 days (thus effective protection for nearly 150 days/5 months). The absence must be caused as a result of illness, certified by a registered medical practitioner, arising out of pregnancy and confinement and rendering the worker unfit to work. After expiry of maternity leave (60 days) and further expiration of 90 days, an employer may terminate a female worker with reasonable cause and excuse.

All the Maternity Protection under the Employment Act 1955 is applicable to all female employee irrespective of their coverage of 1st Schedule of the EA and their wages.

Source: Sections 37(4) & 42 of the Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)

Right to Return to Same Position

Right to return to same position is not expressly provided under the Employment Act. The Act prohibits dismissal of female workers during maternity leave (60 days) and illness related to pregnancy and confinement (extended 90 days). Since, dismissal is not allowed, the right to return is presumably provided under the law.

Source: Sections 37(4) & 42 of the Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)

Breastfeeding

There is no provision on nursing and breastfeeding breaks under the Employment Act for new mothers in order to feed their children during working hours.
ILO Conventions

Most ILO OSH Conventions deal with very specific Occupational Safety hazards, such as asbestos and chemicals. Convention 155 (1981) is the relevant general convention here. Labour Inspection Convention: 81 (1947)

Malaysia has ratified the Convention 81 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The employer, in all fairness, should make sure that the work process is safe.

The employer should provide protective clothing and other necessary safety precautions for free.

Workers should receive training in all work-related safety and health aspects and must have been shown the emergency exits.

In order to ensure workplace safety and health, a central, independent and efficient labour inspection system should be present.
Regulations on health and safety:
- Occupational Safety and Health Act 1994 (Act 514)
- Factories & Machinery Act 1967
- Occupational Safety & Health (Use & Standards of Exposure of Chemical Hazards to Health) Regulations 2000
- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)

Employer Cares

The provisions on health and safety are found in the Occupational Safety and Health Act 1994 (OSHA). It is “the duty of every employer and every self-employed person to ensure, so far as is practicable, the safety, health and welfare at work of all his employees.”

The above duty includes the provision and maintenance of plant and systems of work which are safe and without risks to health; arrangements for ensuring safety and absence of risks to health in connection with the use or operation, handling, storage and transport of plant and substances; provision of necessary information, instruction and supervision; provision and maintenance of safe means of access and exit; and provision and maintenance of a safe working environment with adequate facilities for workers’ welfare at work.

It is the duty of every employer and self-employed person to prepare (and revise as and when necessary) a written safety and health policy and indicate the organization and arrangements for carrying out that policy. Employer is required to bring the policy and any revision in it to the notice of all his employees.

In the case of contravention to the above provisions, a person, on conviction, is liable to a fine not exceeding fifty thousand ringgit or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both.

Source: Sections 15-19 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act 1994 (Act 514)

Free Protection

Personal protective equipment (PPE) including goggles, gloves, leggings, caps, footwear and protective ointment or lotion is first required under the Factories & Machinery Act 1967. The cost for the provision of PPE cannot be shifted to the worker since the Occupational Safety & Health Act 1994 states that “No employer shall levy or permit to be levied on any employee of his any charge in respect of anything done or provided in pursuance of this Act or any regulation made there under”.

It is the duty of a worker to wear (or use) the PPE provided by the employer for the purpose of preventing risks to the safety and health and comply with instructions on OSH provided by the employer or any other person under the OSH Act.

Occupational Safety & Health (Use & Standards of Exposure of Chemical Hazardous to Health) Regulations 2000 considers provision of approved personal protective equipment as a control measure (for controlling chemicals hazardous to health).

Sources: Section 24 of the Factories & Machinery Act 1967; Sections 24 & 26 of the Occupational Safety & Health Act 1994; Regulation 15(1) of the Occupational Safety & Health (Use & Standards of Exposure of Chemical Hazardous to Health) Regulations 2000

Training

In accordance with the OSHA 1994 (Act 514), it is general duty of an employer to provide instruction and training to its workers.

In accordance with Factories and Machinery Act 1967, no person may be employed at any machine or in any process, being a machine or process liable to cause bodily injury, unless he has been fully instructed as to the dangers likely to arise and the precautions to be observed, and has either received sufficient instruction in work at the machine or process or is under adequate supervision by a person who has knowledge and experience of the machine or process.

Occupational Safety and Health (Use and Standards of Exposure of Chemicals Hazardous to Health) Regulations 2000 also has provisions on training and instruction for workers and requires the employer to provide such information, instruction and training as may be necessary to enable them to know the risk to health created by such exposure; and the precautions which should be taken.

Employer is required to review and conduct the training programme - (a) at least once in two years; (b) whenever there is a change in the hazard information on the chemicals hazardous to health, safe work practices or control measures; or (c) each time employees are assigned to new tasks or new work areas where they are exposed or likely to be exposed to chemicals hazardous to health.

A training program must also be documented and kept for inspection by any occupational safety and health officer.

Labour Inspection System

There is limited legislation on this matter. Occupational Safety and Health Act 1994 talks about the powers of entry, inspection, examination, seizure and etc and section 43 is on further provisions in relation to inspection. These are only applicable to inspections done by the occupational and safety health officer. Meanwhile, the Part XIV of the Employment Act 1955 talks about inspection that can be done by the Director General.

The labour inspection system depends on the power and authorities given by the written law. Referring back to the relevant legislations, the OSHA 1994 and EA 1955, the authorities’ powers are different. Besides the fact that it is carried out by different person in charge; health officer or Director General, the power to inspect is slightly different. For the Director General, he or she shall have power to enter without previous notice at all times any place of employment where he has reasonable grounds for believing that employees are employed and to inspect any building occupied or used for any purpose connected with such employment and to make any inquiry which he considers necessary in relation to any matter within the EA 1995. On the other hand, the occupational safety and health officer shall inspect and examine a place of work other than residential purposes if he received consent from the owner of where he has reasonable cause to believe that there has been an act contradictory to the OSHA 1994. The Director General can enter without giving any notice but the officer has to produce the certificate of authorization enter. These are based on sections 39(1) of OSHA 1994 and 65 of EA 1995 respectively.

08/13 SICK LEAVE & EMPLOYMENT INJURY BENEFIT

ILO Conventions

Convention 102 (1952), Conventions 121 (1964) and 130 (1969) concerning Social Security, Employment Injury Benefits and Medical Care and Sickness Benefits

Malaysia has not ratified the Conventions 102, 121 & 130.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

A worker’s rights to work and income should be protected when illness strikes. The national labour law may provide that sickness benefit may not be paid during the first 3 days of your absence. Minimally, a worker should be entitled to an income during first 6 months of illness. This income should be at least 45 per cent of the minimum wage. (Countries are free to opt for a system which guarantees 60 per cent of the last wages during the first 6 months of illness or even during the first year). A worker must be entitled to paid sick leave.

During illness, a worker should be entitled to medical care without any additional cost. Employees and their family members should have access to the necessary minimal medical care at an affordable cost.

During the first 6 months of illness, a worker should not be fired.

If a worker is disabled due to an occupational disease or accident, he/she must receive a higher benefit. In the case of temporary or total incapacity/disability, a worker may at least be provided 50% of his average wage while in the case of fatal injury, the survivors may be provided with 40% of the deceased worker’s average wage in periodical payments.

Income

Paid sick leave is provided under the Employment Act 1955. An employee is entitled to sick leave after examination and recommendation by a registered medical practitioner appointed by the employer or by any other registered medical practitioner or medical officer or dental surgeon where usually, he examination is done at the expense of employer. The length of fully paid sick leave (paid at the ordinary rate of pay for every day of sick leave) depends on the length of years of employment/ length of service:

If hospitalization is not necessary, the sick leave in aggregate is as follows:
   i. 14 calendar days if length of employment is less than two years;
   ii. 18 calendar days if employee has worked for two or more years but less than five years;
   iii. 22 calendar days if the length of employment is five years or more;

If hospitalization is required (or employee is deemed ill enough to be hospitalized), as certified by such registered medical practitioner or medical officer, the paid sick leave in aggregate is 60 days. The total aggregate leave (hospitalization and non-hospitalization) is 60 days. Employee is required to get the certificate from the registered medical practitioner or medical officer (as required) and inform/ attempt to inform the employer on such leave within 48 hours of its commencement. A contravention to this is deemed absence from work without permission of employer and without reasonable excuse and the contract may be deemed to be broken by employee.

An employee will not be entitled for paid sick leave during the period:
   i. When the employee is on paid maternity leave where if a female employee is on unpaid maternity allowance, then she would be paid for sick leave during the period.
   ii. When the employee is receiving any compensation for disablement under the Workmen’s Compensation Act 1952 or when he is receiving periodical payments from SOCSO for temporary disablement.

Medical Care

Employees’ Social Security Act 1969 has provisions on medical benefits to workers requiring medical care.

An insured person whose condition requires (as a result of employment injury) medical treatment and attendance is entitled to medical benefit. The medical benefit can be provided in the form of outpatient treatment and attendance in a hospital, visits to the home of insured person or treatment as inpatient in a hospital. Government hospitals and physicians under contract with the Social Security Organization will provide the necessary care. The scale of medical benefits is determined by the Social Security Organization (SOCSO).

Disability / Work Injury Benefit

Work injury benefits are provided under the Employees’ Social Security Act 1969 and managed by the Social Security Organization (SOCSO). All employees and employers who contribute to this scheme are entitled for the benefits listed upon gaining the necessary approval from the SOCSO.

There are two categories of scheme covered which are the employment injury and invalidity schemes. Employment Injury Scheme provides protection to an employee against accident or an occupational disease arising out of and in the course of his employment. The protection under this scheme covers industrial accident, accident during emergency and occupational disease. The invalidity scheme is when an Insured Person shall be considered as suffering from invalidity by reason of specific morbid condition of permanent nature either incurable or is not likely to be cured and no longer capable of earning, by work corresponding to his strength and physical ability, at least 1/3 of the customary earnings of a sound Insured Person.

The scheme provides 24-hour coverage to employee who suffers from invalidity or death due to any cause and not related to his employment.

Meanwhile, the rates are of contributions are divided into two categories where:

i. Contributions of the First Category: For employees who are less than 60 years of age, contributions payable by employers and employees are for the Employment Injury Scheme and the Invalidity Scheme.

The rate of contribution under this category is 1.75% of employer’s share and 0.5% of employee’s monthly wages according to the contribution schedule.

ii. Contributions of the Second Category: All employees who have reached the age of 60 must be covered under this category for the Employment Injury Scheme only. For eligible new employees who are 55 years of age, they must be covered under the Second Category.

The text in this document was last updated in February 2020. For the most recent and updated text on Employment & Labour Legislation in Malaysia in Malay, please refer to: https://gajimu.my
The rate of contribution under this category is 1.25% of employees’ monthly wages, payable by the employer, based on the contribution schedule.

Starting 1st January 2019, SOCSO EI Scheme has been introduced by the government where it is applicable to all foreign workers in Malaysia who have valid working permit issued by the Immigration Department of Malaysia including expatriates except for domestic servants.

The requirements needed for this scheme is that new foreign workers must possess valid working permit, passport and Special Pass while existing foreign workers must possess valid passport and Visitor’s Pass (Temporary Employment) or a valid Employment Pass issued by the Immigration Department of Malaysia. For existing foreign workers in Malaysia who have valid Foreign Workers Compensation Scheme (FWCS), they have to be registered with SOCSO by their employers a day after the expiration of FWCS, subject to the end of the cooling-off period for FWCS on 31 December 2019. Beginning 1 January 2020, all employers shall register with SOCSO although their foreign workers are still covered under FWCS. New foreign workers entering Malaysia on or after 1 January 2019 have to register with SOCSO once they are validated by the Immigration Department of Malaysia at any gazette port of entry.

The rate of contribution is 1.25% of the insured monthly wages and to be paid by the employer only, referring to the Second Category Contribution Schedule for EI Scheme only.

Contributions payable for any month must be paid no later than the 15th day of each succeeding month. For example, contributions for January 2019 must be paid latest by 15 February 2019.

The benefits provided under EI scheme are medical benefit, temporary disablement benefit, permanent disablement benefit in dependants’ benefit, funeral benefit, constant-attendance allowance, rehabilitation. The benefits exempted under the EI Scheme for Foreign Workers are the education benefit, vocational, dialysis treatment and return to work programme. However, for foreign workers who die in Malaysia and are repatriated to the country of origin for burial, are eligible for a RM6,500 in Funeral Benefit. For foreign workers who die and buried in Malaysia, their eligible beneficiaries will receive RM2,000 or in the case of non-beneficiaries, the expenses will be reimbursed based on the funeral receipt, whichever is the lowest.

Social Security (minimum standards): Convention 102 (1952). For several benefits somewhat, higher standards have been set in subsequent Conventions
Employment Injury Benefits: Conventions 121 (1964),
Invalidity, Old age and survivors’ benefits: Convention 128(1967)
Medical Care and Sickness Benefits: Convention 130 (1969)

Malaysia has not ratified any of the above-mentioned Conventions.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

In the normal circumstances, the pensionable age may not be set higher than 65 years of age. If retirement age is fixed above 65 years, it should give “due regard to the working ability of elderly persons” and “demographic, economic and social criteria, which shall be demonstrated statistically”. Pension can be set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

When the breadwinner has died, the spouse and children are entitled to a benefit, expressed as a percentage of the minimum wage, or a percentage of the earned wage. This must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

For a limited period of time, the unemployed has a right to unemployment benefit set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Invalidity benefit is provided when a protected person is unable to engage in a gainful employment, before standard retirement age, due to a non-occupational chronic condition resulting in disease, injury or disability. Invalidity Benefit must at least be 40% of the reference wage.
Regulations on social security:
- Minimum Retirement Age Act 2012
- Employees’ Social Security 1969 (Act 4)
- Employees Provident Fund (EPF) Act 1991

Pension Rights

Under the Minimum Retirement Age Act 2012, effective from 1 July 2013, the retirement age for all private sector employees is 60 years. A higher retirement age may also be set by the Minister.

An employer who prematurely retires his employee before he attains the minimum retirement age is liable to a fine not exceeding RM 10,000. A premature retirement however does not include an optional retirement (where the retirement age is agreed in the contract of service or collective agreement) or termination of contract of service for any other reason other than age. Any retirement age in the contract of service or collective agreement which is less than the minimum retirement age as provided by the Act is deemed void and substituted with the minimum retirement age as provided by the Act, i.e., 60 years.

The old age benefits are provided under the Employees Provident Fund (EPF) Act which covers all employees with certain exceptions. EPF membership is compulsory for all private sector employees as well non-pensionable public sector employees. Voluntary coverage is available for domestic workers, out workers, self-employed persons, and foreign workers. The total maximum contribution is 24% of the individual’s monthly salary (employer contribution: 13%; employee contribution: 11%). Employer contribution depending on the age of the worker and workers’ wages ranges between 6% to 13%. Employee contribution, depending on the age of workers, ranges between 5.5% and 11%.

EPF contributions may be withdrawn in the following cases: at age 55 years; in the case of permanent disability; in the case of death; on leaving Malaysia permanently. The EPF account is divided into two parts: Account 1 (70% of the monthly contributions) and Account 2 (30% of the monthly contributions). Withdrawals from Account 1 are possible for retirement, at the age of 55 years, where the balance of both accounts is withdrawn under following conditions: as a lump sum; as periodic payments; as a combination of lump sum and periodic payments. Withdrawals from Account 2 are possible once the insured person has attained the age of 50 years, for financing the education or medical expenses of the insured person or that of children.

Dependents' / Survivors' Benefit

The dependents or survivors’ benefits are provided through Social Security Organization (SOCSO) established under Employees’ Social Security Act of 1969.

The survivors or dependents’ benefits are payable to eligible dependents of an insured person who dies irrespective of the cause of death (not related to employment). It is paid to the eligible dependents of an insured person who dies before attaining the age of 60 years and fulfils the qualifying conditions for full or reduced pension.

The deceased person is deemed to have completed full qualifying period (and thus eligible for full pension) if he had at least 24 months of contributions in the last 40 months before death or had contributions in at least two-thirds (66.7%) of the months since first becoming insured, with a total of at least 24 months of contributions.

In order to qualify for a reduced survivors’ pension, the deceased must have paid contributions for at least one-third (33%) of the months since first becoming insured, with a total of at least 24 months of contributions.

The survivors’ benefits are payable to dependents which include widow, widower and child (under the age of 21 except those who are disabled). If there are no immediate dependents, i.e., no widow, widower or child(ren), the benefit can be provided to siblings (brothers and sisters), parents as well as grandparents (if the insured person’s parents are deceased). 60% of the full daily benefit is paid to the widow (paid to widower only if he was already dependent) and 40% to unmarried children under 21 (until completion of graduate degree, no limit in the case of disabled). If there is no widow, widower or children, 40% of the daily benefit is paid to parents (to grandparents if parents are deceased) and 30% to unmarried brothers and sisters under the age of 21 years.

If the deceased was a disability pensioner, 100% of the disability pension is paid. If the deceased was employed at the time of death, 50% to 65% of the insured person’s average monthly earnings in the 24 months before death is paid, depending on the number of contributions. The initial percentage is 50% which rises by 1% for every 12-month contributions paid in excess of the first 24 months however it does not exceed 65%

Unemployment Benefits

In the year 2018, a new scheme known as Employment Insurance Scheme has been introduced. The benefits that scheme produced are job-hunting assistance, re-employment allowance, reduced income allowance, training allowance and career counselling. The claims for these benefits are only for a period of 6 months and it started with 80% of his/her last salary and it reduces up till 30% at the end of the 6th month. Every month, employees need to make 0.2% contribution of their salary to EIS and employers also make such amount of contributions to SOCSO where the contribution based on salary is capped at a monthly level of RM 4,000.00

A person is not qualified for any of the benefits if they have:

a) Lost their job due to misconduct at work
b) Tendered voluntary resignation
c) Stopped working due to retirement
d) Stopped working due to expiry of fixed term contract.

Invalidity Benefits

Invalidity is defined as permanent morbid condition that is unlikely to be cured and which results in an employee losing at least one-third (33%) of his or her capability compared to a normal individual, which ultimately causes a loss of income for the employee. Invalidity must be caused by reasons or circumstances not related to work.

In order to be eligible for invalidity benefit, a person must be younger than 60, with at least a 66.7% assessed loss of earning capacity, have at least 24 months of contributions in the last 40 months; or have contributions in at least 66.7% of the months since first becoming insured, with a total of at least 24 months of contributions. An invalidity grant is paid if the insured person is ineligible for a disability pension but has at least 12 months of contributions.

50% to 65% of the insured person’s average monthly earnings in the 24 months before death is paid, depending on the number of contributions. The initial percentage is 50% which rises by 1% for every 12-month contributions paid in excess of the first 24 months however it does not exceed 65. The minimum survivors’ pension is 475 ringgits. There is a provision for constant attendance allowance (at the rate of 40% of an insured person’s pension with a maximum amount of 500 ringgits per month) if a person is so severely incapacitated that he/she requires the constant attendance of others to perform daily function.

ILO Conventions

Convention 111 (1958) lists the discrimination grounds which are forbidden. Convention 100 (1952) is about Equal Remuneration for Work of Equal Value.

Malaysia has ratified the Convention 100 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, equal pay for men and women for work of equal value is a must, regardless of marital status. Pay inequality based on race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction/place of birth or social origin is also forbidden. A transparent remuneration system and the clear matching of pay and position should be in place and to help prevent wage discrimination.

Not clearly provided in ILO Conventions. However, sexual intimidation/harassment is gender discrimination.

An employer can’t discriminate against you on in any aspect of employment (appointment, promotion, training and transfer) on the basis of union membership or participation in union activities, filing of a complaint against an employer, race, colour, sex, marital status, family responsibilities, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, temporary absence due to illness, age, trade union membership, disability/HIV-AIDS, or absence from work during maternity leave. (Conventions 111, 156, 158, 159 and 183)

People have the right to work and there can’t be occupational segregation on the basis of gender.
Regulations on fair treatment:
- Federal Constitution of Malaysia 1957
- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)
- Penal Code 1936 (Act 574)
- 1999 Code of Practice on the Prevention and Eradication of Sexual Harassment in the Workplace

Equal Pay

The Federal Constitution in its article 8 prohibits discrimination against citizens on the ground only of religion, race, descent, place of birth or gender however this provision is applicable to the legislature, government authorities and the Parliament.

There is no separate provision on equal pay for equal work or work of equal value in labour laws of Malaysia.

Source: Article 8 of the Federal Constitution of Malaysia 1957

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment has been defined under the Employment Act 1955 through an amendment in the Act in 2012. Prior to this, Malaysia had no law governing sexual harassment and the victims of sexual harassment could only use provisions of the Code of Practice on the Prevention and Eradication of Sexual Harassment in the Workplace 1999. The Code acted only as a guideline for the employers.

Sexual harassment is defined as “any unwanted conduct of a sexual nature, whether verbal, non-verbal, visual, gestural or physical, directed at a person which is offensive or humiliating or is a threat to his well-being, arising out of and in the course of his employment”.

A worker can file a complaint of sexual harassment against another employer and an employer can also file a complaint of sexual harassment against an employee. On receipt of a complaint, an employer is required to inquire into the complaint in a prescribed manner. An employer however may refuse to inquire into a complaint if the complaint of sexual harassment by the complainant was previously inquired into and no sexual harassment was proven or if the employer is of the opinion that the complaint is frivolous, vexatious or is not made in good faith. A complainant who feels dissatisfied with the refusal of the employer to inquire into his/her complaint of sexual harassment may refer the case to Director General. The Director General may decide to inquire into the complaint and direct the employer to conduct such inquiry. The director General may also agree with the decision of the employer not to conduct any inquiry. If the complaint of sexual harassment is filed against employer, the Director General may inquire into the complaint in a prescribed manner.

The text in this document was last updated in February 2020. For the most recent and updated text on Employment & Labour Legislation in Malaysia in Malay, please refer to: https://gajimu.my
As a result of the inquiry on complaint of sexual harassment against an employee, an employer may take following action:
   a) Dismiss the employee without notice;
   b) Downgrade the employee;
   c) Impose any other punishment as deemed fit (where if punishment of suspension without wages is imposed, it must not exceed a period of two weeks)

As a result of inquiry (conducted by the Director General) on complaint of sexual harassment against the employer where harassment is proven, the complainant may terminate his/her contract of service without notice. However, in such case, the worker/complainant is entitled to termination notice pay, termination benefits and indemnity.

An employer who fails to inquire into the complaints of sexual harassment or inform the complainant of the refusal and the reasons of refusal or sending report to the Director General shall be considered as committing an offence and on conviction is liable to a fine not exceeding RM 10,000

The provisions of Penal Code are also relevant here. S509 of the Code states that “Whoever, intending to insult the modesty of any person, utters any word, makes any sound or gesture, or exhibits any object, intending that such word or sound shall be heard, or that such gesture or object shall be seen by such person, or intrudes upon the privacy of such person, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years or with fine or with both”.

Non-Discrimination

Right to equality and non-discrimination is provided and protected under article 8 of the Federal Constitution of Malaysia. First part of the article states that “all persons are equal before the law and entitled to the equal protection of the law”. The second part states that:

“There shall be no discrimination against citizens on the ground only of religion, race, descent, place of birth or gender in any law or in the appointment to any office or employment under a public authority or in the administration of any law relating to the acquisition, holding or disposition of property or the establishing or carrying on of any trade, business, profession, vocation or employment”.

The provisions in the Malaysian legislation on anti-discrimination can be found mainly in Industrial Relations Act 1967 and Employment Act 1955. The 1967 law prohibits employers from discrimination against a person in regard to employment, promotion, any condition of employment or working conditions on the ground that he is or is not a member or officer of a trade union. Similarly, the Employment Act stipulates that an employee may file a complaint to the Director General that he/she is being discriminated against in relation to another (local or foreign) employee in respect of employment conditions. Thus, the explicit provisions on non-discrimination are found only for trade union membership or a worker’s nationality.

Equal Choice of Profession

No provisions could be located in the Constitution or laws promoting equal choice of profession for men and women. Provisions of article 8 of the Federal Constitution can be used to a certain extent which states that “There shall be no discrimination against citizens on the ground only of religion, race, descent, place of birth or gender in any law ………………..or in the administration of any law relating to the acquisition, holding or disposition of property or the establishing or carrying on of any trade, business, profession, vocation or employment”.

ILO Conventions

Minimum Age: Convention 138 (1973)
Worst Forms of Child labour: Convention 182 (1999)

Malaysia has ratified both Conventions 138 & 182.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, children may not be forced to perform work that could harm their health and hampers their physical and mental development.

All children should be able to attend school. Once this is safeguarded, there is no objection against children performing light jobs between the ages of 12 and 14. The general minimum age is 15 years however developing countries may set this at 14 years. The minimum age for hazardous work, work that is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, is 18 years. It can also be set at a lower level of 16 years under certain circumstances.

Children should not be employed in a work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children. It is considered one of the worst forms of child labour. The minimum age for such hazardous work is 18 years.
Regulations on minors and youth:

  - Children and Young Persons (Employment) Amendment Act 2019 (Act A1586)

Minimum Age for Employment

Employment of children and young persons is regulated under the Children and Young Persons (Employment) Amendment Act 2019 (Act A1586). The Act defines child as a person under the age of 15 years and young person means a person who has attained the age of 15 years and under the age of 18 years.

If one ever thought about what is the legal minimum age for employment under the law for a child, the newly inserted Section 2(2A) CAYPEA provides that it shall be not less than 13 years old, provided that only light work is involved. Light work means any work which is not likely to be harmful to the child's health, mental, or physical capacity or to prejudice his/her attendance at school.

Sources: Section 1A and 2(2A) of the Children and Young Persons (Employment) Amendment Act 2019 (Act A 1586)

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work

As a general rule, children and young persons are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work specified under the newly inserted Fourth Schedule of CAYPEA via the 2019 Amendments, which basically refers to work conducted in a hazardous environment as well as exposing to hazardous machinery.

However, a young person may be engaged in hazardous work with personal supervision if he is working under an apprenticeship contract or undergoing vocational training, as provided under the newly inserted Section 2(1B) CAYPEA via the 2019 Amendments.

A child may be engaged in the following employments:
  a) employment involving light work suitable to the child's capacity in any undertaking carried on by his/her family;
  b) employment in any public entertainment, in accordance with the terms and conditions of a license granted in that behalf under this Act;
  c) employment requiring a child to perform work approved or sponsored by the Federal Government or the Government of any State and carried on in any school, training institution or training vessel; and
  d) employment as an apprentice under a written apprenticeship contract approved by the Director-General of Labour with whom a copy of such contract has been filed.

Whereas, a young person may be engaged in the following employments:
  a) employment involving light work suitable to the young person's capacity (whether or not the undertaking is carried on by his/her family);
b) employment in any office, shop (including hotels, bars, restaurants, and stalls), godown, factory, workshop, store, boarding house, theatre, cinema, club or association;
c) employment in an industrial undertaking suitable to the young person's capacity; and
d) employment on any vessel under the personal charge of the young person's parent or guardian.

Last, there is also a list of employment that children or young persons are strictly not permitted to be engaged in under the newly inserted Fifth Schedule of CAYPEA via the 2019 Amendments. For examples, such employment includes prostitution, trade of alcoholic beverages and gambling activities.

Number of days of work

No child and the young person shall be required to work for more than 6 days in any period of 7 consecutive days.

Hours of work of children

A ‘child’ in any employment is not permitted:

a) to work in between the period of 8 pm to 7 am except for those who engaged in public entertainment;
b) to work for more than 3 consecutive hours without a period of rest of at least thirty minutes;
c) to work for more than 6 hours in a day or, if the child is attending school, for a period which together with the time he spends attending school, exceeds 7 hours;
d) to commence work on any day without having had a period of not less than 14 consecutive hours free from work.

Hours of work of young persons

Whereas, a ‘young person’ in any employment is not permitted:

a) to work in between the period of 8 pm to 6 am except for those who engaged in public entertainment, agriculture undertaking, or vessel under the personal charge of his/her parent or guardian.
b) to work for more than 4 consecutive hours without a period of rest of at least thirty minutes;
c) to work for more than 7 hours in a day or, if the child is attending school, for a period which together with the time he spends attending school, exceeds 8 hours;
d) to commence work on any day without having had a period of not less than 12 consecutive hours free from work.
The relevant provisions of the Employment Act 1955 and regulations made thereunder

The relevant provisions under the Employment Act 1955 and of any regulations made thereunder shall be applicable to the employment of any child or young person accordingly in the absence of specific provisions under CAYPEA.

Offenses and penalty

Any person contravening the provisions under the CAYPEA shall be guilty of an offense and shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment of not exceeding 2 years or to fine not exceeding RM50,000 or to both; and for repeat offenders, shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment of not exceeding 5 years or to fine not exceeding RM100,000 or to both.

Forced labour: Conventions 29 (1930)
Abolition of Forced labour: Conventions 105 (1957)
Forced labour is the work one has to perform under threat of punishment: forfeit of wages, dismissal, harassment or violence, even corporal punishment. Forced labour means violation of human rights.

Malaysia has ratified both Conventions 29 & 105.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Except for certain cases, forced or compulsory labour (exacted under the threat of punishment and for which you may not have offered voluntarily) is prohibited.

Employers have to allow workers to look for work elsewhere. If a worker is looking for work elsewhere, he/she should not be shortened on wages or threatened with dismissal. (In the reverse cases, international law considers this as forced labour).

If the total working hours, inclusive of overtime exceed 56 hours per week, the worker is considered to be working under inhumane working conditions.
Regulations on forced labour:
- Federal Constitution of Malaysia 1957
- Penal Code 1936 (Act 574)
- Employment Act 1955 (Act 265)

Prohibition on Forced and Compulsory Labour

Forced and compulsory labour is prohibited under the Federal Constitution and Penal Code. In accordance with article 6 of the Constitution, no person can be held in slavery. It prohibits all forms of forced labour however allows Parliament to enact law requiring compulsory service for national purposes. However, work or service required from a person as a consequence of conviction or finding guilty in a court of law is not considered forced labour provided that such work or service is carried out under the supervision and control of a public authority.

Compulsory labour is also prohibited under Penal Code which states that “whoever unlawfully compels any person to labour against the will of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year or with fine or with both”.

Freedom to Change Jobs and Right to Quit

Workers have total freedom to change jobs and have the right to quit after serving agreed notice. The minimum term of notice period unless stated otherwise in the contract of employment) is as follows:

i. Four weeks if length of employment is less than two years;
ii. Six weeks if employee has worked for two or more years but less than five years; and
iii. Eight weeks if the length of employment is five years or more

Inhumane Working Conditions

From the perspective of working hours, as stated in the Employment Act 1955, are eight (8) hours a day and forty-eight (48) hours a week and the compulsory 30 minutes break after working for 5 consecutive hours The maximum overtime hours are 104 hours a month as stated under Employment Act and Employment (Limitation of Overtime Work) Regulations 1980.

Similar provisions are found in the Employment Act which requires that, except under certain circumstances prescribed in article 60A(2), no employer shall require any employee under any circumstances to work for more than twelve hours in any one day.
Besides the working hours, the law itself also highlight the need to have a break at least one day in a week or not least than 30 consecutive hours for the shift workers as a rest day.

The only exception to the abovementioned conditions is a written approval from the DGL.

ILO Conventions

Freedom of association and protection of the right to organize: Convention 87 (1948)
Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining: Convention 98 (1949)

Malaysia has ratified the Convention 98 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Freedom of association means freedom to join a trade union. This is part of the fundamental human rights. Employees may not be put at a disadvantage when they are active in the trade union outside working hours. The list of exclusions for sectors of economic activity and workers in an organization should be short.

Trade unions are entitled to negotiate with employers on term of employment without hindrance. The freedom of a trade union to negotiate with employers to try and conclude collective agreements is protected. (The ILO has a special procedure for handling complaints from unions about violation of this principle).

Workers have the right to strike in order to defend their social and economic interests. It is incidental and corollary to the right to organize provided in ILO convention 87.
Regulations on trade unions:
- Federal Constitution of Malaysia 1957
- Trade Union Act 1959
- Industrial Relations Act 1967

Freedom to Join and Form a Union

In accordance with the Federal Constitution of Malaysia, all citizens have the right to form associations however it allows restrictions as deemed necessary or expedient in the interest of the security of the Federation or any part thereof, public order or morality. The right to association and to form and join unions are regulated under the Industrial Relation Act 1967 (Act 177) and Trade Union Act 1959 (Act 262).

Trade union is defined as any association or combination of workmen or employers, being workmen whose place of work is in Peninsular Malaysia, Sabah or Sarawak, as the case may be, or employers employing workmen in Peninsular Malaysia, Sabah or Sarawak, as the case may be within any particular establishment, trade, occupation or industry or within any similar trades, occupations or industries. Both temporary and permanent workers are allowed to form and join unions.

In accordance with Industrial Relation Act 1967, workers in Malaysia have the right to form and join trade union. Employers are prohibited to prevent a worker from joining a union by putting a condition in contract of service. Moreover, no employer may refuse to employ a worker on the grounds that he is a trade union member or officer. In addition, no employer may discriminate against a worker on the grounds that he is a trade union member or officer. No worker may be threatened with dismissal or is dismissed if he proposes to join a trade union or if he participates in union activities. The Act further requires that no person may interfere with, restrain or coerce a workman or an employer in the exercise of his rights to form and assist in the formation of and join a trade union and to participate in its lawful activities. It also prohibits the trade union of employers and workers to interfere in each other’s establishment, functioning and administration.

Every trade union must be registered with the Director General of Trade Unions (DGTU). A trade union is required to submit an application for registration, signed by at least seven members. Once the DGTU accepts the application for registration, it issues a certificate of registration to the union which is the conclusive evidence that trade union is duly registered. Registration of a trade union can be cancelled by the DGTU for many reasons. Some of these include:

- a) If the certificate of registration was obtained or issued by fraud or mistake;
- b) If the object(s), rules or constitution of the trade union are unlawful;
- c) If the trade union is being used for unlawful purpose or its funds have been expended in an unlawful manner

A trade union enjoys rights, immunities and privileges only once it is registered.

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

In order to engage in collective bargaining, a trade union must be registered with the DGTU and granted recognition by the employer. The Industrial Relations Act 1967 stipulates the mechanism and requirements for trade union recognition. A trade union may obtain recognition by serving a notice to the employer with a claim for recognition. Within 21 days, employer is required to either accord recognition or inform the trade union of the grounds for not granting recognition. If the employer does not respond in the 21-day period or decides not to grant recognition, trade union may report this matter to the Director General of Industrial Relations (DGIR) within 14 days. DGIR may ascertain the competence of the trade union to represent workmen and determine the percentage of workmen (who are members of the claimant trade union) through secret ballot. Once this information is available, DGIR notified the Minister of Human Resources who gives final decision on the recognition claim.

Once a trade union is accorded recognition, either party may invite the other to commence collective bargaining. This invitation for bargaining is in writing and may include one or more of the following proposals: provision for training to enhance skills and knowledge of the workmen; provision for an annual review of the wage system; and provision for a performance-based remuneration system.

If an invitation to collective bargaining has been refused or is not accepted within 14 days or where collective bargaining has not commenced within 30 days from the date of receipt of reply, the party making the invitation may notify the DGIR in writing who may take such necessary steps to bringing the parties for commencing collective bargaining without any delay. If the collective bargaining still does not start, a trade dispute is deemed to exist.

A collective agreement is in writing and is signed by all the parties to the agreement. A collective agreement sets out the terms of the agreement including the names of the parties; duration of the agreement (cannot be less than three years); procedure for its modification and termination; and procedure for adjustment of any question that may arise with regard to its implementation or interpretation. Terms or conditions in a collective agreement which are less favourable than those provided under the law are null and provisions of law are substituted in their place. A signed copy of the collective agreement must jointly be deposited by the parties to Registrar within one month of its entry into force.

Right to Strike

A “strike” is broadly defined under the Trade Union Act and IR Act as:
“the cessation of work by a body of workers acting in combination, or a concerted refusal or a refusal under a common understanding of a number of workers to continue to work or to accept employment, and includes any act or omission by a body of workers acting in Industrial action including strikes, lockouts and pickets are governed by laws. The Trade Union Act proves that a trade union may call for a strike only if:

a. it obtains the consent of at least two-thirds of its total members (by secret ballot);
b. it has allowed for at least 7 seven days to pass after submitting the results of secret ballot to the DGTU;
c. it proposed strike in compliance with trade union rules and other applicable legislation.

The Industrial Relations Act has further provisions on strikes and lockouts. A strike or lockout is deemed illegal if it is declared or commenced in contravention of the provisions of IR Act (strikes in essential services and other conditions/situations as specified under sections 43-44 of the Act); or has any other objective than the furtherance of a trade dispute between the workmen on strike and their employer or between the employer who declared a lockout and his workmen. A lockout declared by the employer as a result of an illegal strike (or a strike declared in consequence of an illegal lockout) is not considered illegal. Longer notice duration are required for declaring a strike in essential services (21-day notice). List of essential services is provided under first schedule of the IR Act.

A worker who commences, continues or acts in furtherance of an illegal strike is, on conviction, liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year or to a fine not exceeding one thousand ringgit or to both and a further fine of fifty ringgits for everyday during which such offense continues. Similar penalty is found for employers for commencing, continuing or acting in furtherance of illegal lockouts.

Peaceful picketing for the purpose of obtaining or communicating information, or persuading or inducing an employee to work or abstain from working is permissible. However, picketing should not be done by many employees so as to intimidate any person, obstruct the approach thereto or egress there from of the employer’s premises or workplace, or lead to a breach of the peace. This penalty is also stipulated for those who instigate or incite others to take part in or act in furtherance of an illegal strike or lockout. A person who knowingly provides financial support in aid of illegal strike or lockout is, on conviction, liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 6 months or a fine not exceeding RM 500 or both. It is interesting to note that all these offenses are seizable (cognizable where arrest without warrant is possible) and non bailable.

If your score is between 19 - 38

As you can see, there is ample room for improvement. But please don't tackle all these issues at once. Start where it hurts most. In the meantime, notify your union or WageIndicator about your situation, so they may help to improve it. When sending an email to us, please be specific about your complaint and if possible name your employer as well. Also, try and find out if your company officially adheres to a code known as Corporate Social Responsibility. If they do, they should live up to at least ILO standards. If they don't adhere to such a code yet, they should. Many companies do by now. You may bring this up.

If your score is between 39 - 49

You're pretty much out of the danger zone. Your employer adheres to most of the existing labour laws and regulations. But there is always room for improvement. So next time you talk to management about your work conditions, prepare well and consult this DecentWorkCheck as a checklist.
