Decent Work Check 2021

Iftikhar Ahmad
WageIndicator Foundation - www.wageindicator.org

WageIndicator started in 2001 to contribute to a more transparent labour market for workers and employers by publishing easily accessible information on a website. It collects, compares and shares labour market information through online and face-to-face surveys and desk research. It publishes the collected information on national websites, thereby serving as an online library for wage information, labour law, and career advice, both for workers/employees and employers. The WageIndicator websites and related communication activities reach out to millions of people on a monthly basis. The WageIndicator concept is owned by the independent, non-profit WageIndicator Foundation, established in 2003. The Foundation has offices in Amsterdam (HQ), Ahmedabad, Bratislava, Buenos Aires, Cape Town, Islamabad and Venice.

Many people contributed to the development of the Decent Work Check as a tool and to this Check for Estonia. Those who contributed to the development of tool include Paulien Osse, Kea Tijdens, Dirk Dragstra, Leontine Bijleveld, Egidio G. Vaz Raposo and Lorena Ponce De Leon. Iftikhar Ahmad later expanded the work to new topics in 2012-13 and made the work more legally robust. Daniela Ceccon, Huub Bouma, and Gunjan Pandya have supported the work by bringing it online through building and operating labour law database and linking it to the WageIndicator websites. Special thanks are due to the WageIndicator Pakistan office (headed by Iftikhar Ahmad), which works on Decent Work Checks since 2012.

Minimum Wage Database and Labour Law Database are maintained by the Centre for Labour Research, Pakistan which works as WageIndicator Labour Law office. The team currently comprises Iftikhar Ahmad (team lead), Ayesha Kiran, Ayesha Mir, Sehrish Irfan, and Shanza Sohail. The 2021 country update was done by Sehrish Irfan.

DECENT WORK QUESTIONNAIRE .................................................................................... 51
INTRODUCTION

Decent Work is the type of work for which all of us aspire. It is done under conditions where people are gainfully employed (and there exist adequate income and employment opportunities); social protection system (labour protection and social security) is fully developed and accessible to all; social dialogue and tripartism are promoted and encouraged; and rights at work, as specified in ILO Declaration on Fundamental principles and Rights at Work and Core ILO Conventions, are practiced, promoted and respected.

WageIndicator Foundation has been working, since late 2007, to raise awareness on workplace rights through a unique tool, i.e., Decent Work Check. The Decent Work Check considers different work aspects, which are deemed important in attaining "decent work". The work makes the rather abstract Conventions and legal texts tangible and measurable in practice.

The Decent Work Check employs a double comparison system. It first compares national laws with international labour standards and gives a score to the national regulations (happy or sad face). If national regulations in a country are not consistent with ILO conventions, it receives a sad face and its score decreases (and vice versa). It then allows workers to compare their on-ground situation with national regulations. Workers can compare their own score with national score and see whether their working conditions are consistent with national and international labour standards. The Check is based on de jure labour provisions, as found in the labour legislation.

Decent Work Check is useful both for employees and employers. It gives them knowledge, which is the first step towards any improvement. It informs employees of their rights at the workplace while simultaneously enlightening employers about their obligations. Decent Work Check is also useful for researchers, labour rights organizations conducting surveys on the situation of rights at work and general public wanting to know more about the world of work. WageIndicator teams, around the world, have found out that workers, small employers and even labour inspectors are not, sometimes, fully aware of the labour law. When you are informed - being a workers, self-employed, employee, employer, policy maker, labour inspector - there is a greater possibility that you ask for your rights (as a worker), you comply with rules (as an employer) and you strive to enforce these (as a labour inspector).

The work is relevant to the challenges posed to the future of work especially the effective enforcement of legislation in financially constrained states, rise of precarious employment and measuring the impact of regulatory regimes.

Currently, there are more than 100 countries for which a Decent Work Check is available here. During 2021, the team aims to include at least 10 more countries, thus taking the number of countries with a Decent Work Check to 115!

ILO Conventions

Minimum wage: Convention 131 (1970)
Regular pay & wage protection: Conventions 95 (1949) and 117(1962)

Estonia has not ratified the above mentioned Conventions.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The minimum wage must cover the living expenses of the employee and his/her family members. Moreover, it must relate reasonably to the general level of wages earned and the living standard of other social groups. Wages must be paid regularly on a daily, weekly, fortnightly or monthly basis.
Regulations on work and wages:

- Employment Contracts Act
- Regulation 166 on Introduction of Minimum Wage
- PalgaAlammääraMuutmisePõhimõteteKohta 2008

Minimum Wage

Minimum wages were governed under the Wages Act of 1994. However, since the passage of Employment Contracts Act in 2008, minimum wages are now regulated under the new Act and every year government publishes a new agreement on minimum wages.

The government establishes the minimum wage in the country for a specific unit of time (be it hour, day, week or month) through a regulation. There exists only a single national minimum wage in the country. As an exception, there also exists a minimum wage (of €800 per month) for basic and upper secondary school teachers. There are also collective agreements in certain sectors (health care, road transport, etc.) that set their minimum wages but are not signed by the government into law. The unions in Estonia are actively working towards sectoral minimum wages. No sectoral, occupational or regional minimum wages are defined. An employer is required not to pay a worker less than the minimum wage announced by the government.

Minimum wage is determined through an agreement between the social partners, i.e., the government, the Estonian Trade Union Confederation and the Estonian Employers’ Confederation. The criteria for determining or updating minimum wages includes needs of workers and their families; cost of living; consumer price index/inflation rate; productivity; and level of wages and income in the country.

The Labour Inspectorate is a government agency working under the Ministry of Social Affairs. The main tasks of the Labour Inspectorate are implementation of the working environment policy, state supervision of compliance with the requirements of the legislation on health and safety at work and labour relations in the working environment, informing the public, employees and employers about the risks of the work environment, and resolving individual labour disputes in pre-trial labour disputes bodies. Thus, it is the job of Labour Inspectorate to ensure compliance with minimum wages. The Employment Contract Law however does not specify any monetary fines for violation regarding minimum wages.

Regular Pay

Wages are the remuneration which an employer pays to an employee for work performed in accordance with an employment contract, legal instrument or in other cases prescribed by legislation, a collective agreement or employment contract. Wages are comprised of basic wages and additional remuneration, bonuses and additional payments paid in the cases prescribed by law.

The relevant law on payment of wages is Employment Contracts Act. An employer is under obligation to pay wages to the work under the conditions and at the time agreed on. The wage period may vary for different workers however it cannot exceed one month. Wages have to be paid at the end of wage period in the form of money and legal tender. Wages in kind are not allowed. If a pay day falls on a public holiday or weekly rest day, pay day is deemed to be the day preceding the public holiday or day-off.

There is no clear indication in the law on the number of days at the end of a wage period within which wages have to be paid to a worker. On a pay day, an employer is required to transfer an employee's wages and other remuneration to the bank account indicated by a worker, unless otherwise agreed.

The tax liabilities on an employee are debited from a worker's wages.

ILO Conventions

Compensation overtime: Convention 01 (1919)
Night work: Convention 171 (1990)

Estonia has not ratified the Conventions 01 & 171.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Working overtime is to be avoided. Whenever it is unavoidable, extra compensation is at stake - minimally the basic hourly wage plus all additional benefits you are entitled to. In accordance with ILO Convention 1, overtime pay rate should not be less than one and a quarter times (125%) the regular rate.

Night work means all work which is performed during a period of not less than seven (07) consecutive hours, including the interval from midnight to 5 a.m. A night worker is a worker whose work requires performance of a substantial number of hours of night work which exceeds a specified limit (at least 3 hours). Convention 171 requires that night workers be compensated with reduced working time or higher pay or similar benefits. Similar provisions are found in the Night Work Recommendation No. 178 of 1990.

If a worker has to work on a national/religious holiday or a weekly rest day, he/she should be entitled to compensation. Not necessarily in the same week, provided that the right to a paid compensation is not.

If a worker has to work during the weekend, he/she should thereby acquire the right to a rest period of 24 uninterrupted hours instead. Not necessarily in the weekend, but at least in the course of the following week. Similarly, if a worker has to work on a public holiday, he/she must be given a compensatory holiday. A higher rate of pay for working on a public holiday or a weekly rest day does not take away the right to a holiday/ rest.
Regulations on compensation:
- Employment Contracts Act

Overtime Compensation

The general working hours are 8 hours a day and 40 hours a week. The reference period for 40 hours is seven days (full-time work) unless an employer and employee have agreed on a shorter working time (part-time work).

Overtime work has to be agreed between the parties and overtime work is the work exceeding the general working time at the end of a calculation period. The summarized working time cannot exceed on average 48 hours for a period of seven days over a calculation period of four months. However, this calculation period can be extended by a collective agreement up to 12 months in the case of health care professionals, welfare workers, agricultural workers and tourism workers. Employer and employee may agree on a longer working time where summarized working time may not exceed 52 hours per a period of seven days over a period four months and if such agreement is not unreasonably detrimental to an employee.

An employee also has the right to refuse overtime (if it is more than 8 hours on average a week). A labour inspector also has the right to prohibit or limit overtime work if an employer fails to fulfil the conditions related to occupational safety and health requirements.

An employer may demand workers to work overtime in the event of unforeseen circumstances pertaining to the enterprise or activity of the employer and in particular for prevention of damage. However, even in such cases of emergency, overtime cannot be demanded of a minor, pregnant worker or an employee who the right to pregnancy and maternity leave.

Employers are required to compensate workers for working overtime by providing time-off equal to the overtime hours unless it has been agreed that overtime is compensated for in monetary terms. Employers are required to pay workers 150% of the normal wage rate for working overtime.

In the event of on-call time agreement where parties have agreed that the employee will be available to the employer for performance of duties outside of working time, employer has to pay a worker at least 110% of his normal wages for on-call hours.

Night Work Compensation

Night worker is an employee who works at least three hours of his daily working time or at least one-third of his annual working time at night time (between 22:00 and 06:00).

Night workers cannot work more than eight hours on average over a period of 24 hours in a calculation period of seven days. All such agreements are void by which a worker, whose health is affected by a working environment hazard or characteristics of his work, is obligated to work more than eight hours over a 24-hour period.

For night workers, employers are required to pay 125% of the wages for the work unless it is agreed between the parties that the usual wages include remuneration for working at night time. The parties may also agree to provide additional time-off to a night worker.

Compensatory Holidays / Rest Days

There is no clear provision in the Employment Contracts Act on provision of compensatory rest day for working on a weekly rest day or a public holiday.

An employer may like to give additional time-off to a worker who works on a public holiday. However, no such provision is found in the case of weekly rest days.

Sources: §45 & 53 of Employment Contracts Act

Weekend / Public Holiday Work Compensation

Employment Contract Act has provisions regarding premium pay for workers involved in working on public holidays. However, no such provision could be located for those involved in work on weekly rest days.

The premium rate for working on a public holiday is 200% of the normal wage rate of a worker.

ILO Conventions

Convention 132 (1970) on Holidays with Pay Convention
Conventions 14 (1921), 47 (1935) and 106 (1957) for weekly rest days.
In addition, for several industries, different Conventions apply.

Estonia has ratified the Convention 14 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

An employee is entitled to at least 21 consecutive days of paid annual leave. National and religious holidays are not included. Collective agreements must provide at least one day of annual leave on full remuneration for every 17 days on which the employee worked or was entitled to be paid.

A worker should be entitled to paid leave during national and officially recognized public holidays.

Workers should enjoy a rest period of at least twenty-four consecutive hours in every 7-day period, i.e., a week.
Regulations on annual leave and holidays:
- Employment Contracts Act
- Public Holidays and Days of National Importance Act

Paid Vacation / Annual Leave

Employment Contracts Act has provisions with regard to annual leave, scheduling and splitting of annual leave and payment of annual leave pay.

An employee's annual holiday period is 28 calendar days unless the parties have agreed on a longer period or unless otherwise provided under the law. The annual holidays of a worker do not increase with the length of service and its duration remains the same for a worker with one year or five years of service. The annual holiday period for employees receiving pension on account of incapacity for work is 35 calendar days. The annual leave provision for educational and research staff is up to 56 calendar days. A public holiday and a national holiday are not part of annual leave if it falls during the term of annual leave.

The annual holidays for minors are 35 calendar days unless parties have agreed on a longer period or unless otherwise provided under the law.

The qualifying period for annual leave is six months and a worker may demand annual leave (during the first year of employment) once he has served the employer for at least six months. In the first year of employment, annual leave is granted in proportion to the time worked.

Annual leave may be used within a calendar year and is granted in parts only by agreement of parties (splitting of annual leave is allowed). At least 14 consecutive days of annual leave have to be used by an employee successively. The minimum annual leave, to be taken at one time, cannot be less than seven days. Any unused part of the annual leave is transferred to the next calendar year.

The timing of annual leave is set by the employer taking into the requests of an employee and reasonably combining these with the interests of the enterprise. An employer draws up a holiday schedule for each calendar year and communicates it to the worker within the first quarter of the calendar year.

The following types of workers have the right to demand annual leave at a suitable time: a woman worker immediately before or after pregnancy and maternity leave or immediately after child care leave; a male worker immediately after child care leave or during the pregnancy and maternity leave of his wife; a parent raising a child of up to seven years of age; a parent raising a child of seven to ten years of age-during the child's school holidays; and a minor subject to the obligation to attend school-during school holidays.
Workers receive their average wages during the term of their annual leave. Holiday pay is paid no later than the penultimate working day before the start of holidays unless the parties have agreed otherwise. An agreement on the basis of which holiday pay is paid later than the pay day following the use of annual leave is void. Annual leave pays for (minors and work are with disability) the part exceeding 28 calendar days is paid through the state budget.

A worker cannot receive any payment or other benefits in lieu of annual leave during the validity of an employment contract and all such agreements to the contrary are void. However, in the event of contract termination, an employer is obligated to compensate an employee in monetary form for any unused holiday which has not expired.

Pay on Public Holidays

Under the Act, there is one national day and ten public holidays. All of these are non-working days. The national day is Independence Day and anniversary of the Republic of Estonia, commemorated on February 24. The public holidays are New Year's Day (January 01), Good Friday; Easter Monday; May Day (May 01); Pentecost; Victory Day (June 23); Midsummer Day (June 24); Day of Restoration of Independence (August 20); Christmas Eve (December 24); Christmas Day (December 25); and Boxing Day (December 26). There are also nearly thirteen days of national importance however these are not rest days.

Public holidays are paid days and if a worker is required to work on a public holiday, he is entitled to 200% of the normal wage. In some cases, additional time-off may also be provided if agreed between the parties.

Employer are required to shorten the working day by three hours on days preceding New Year’s Day, the anniversary of the Republic of Estonia, Victory Day and Christmas Eve.

Sources: §1-3 of Public Holidays and Days of National Importance Act; §45 of Employment Contracts Act
Weekly Rest Days

Weekly rest is provided under the Employment Contracts Act.

The general weekly rest period that employee is entitled to, in a seven-day period, cannot be less than 48 consecutive hours unless otherwise provided by the law.

In the case of summarized working time, weekly rest time that employees are entitled to, in a seven-day period, cannot be less than 36 consecutive hours, unless otherwise provided under the law. Weekly rest is usually granted on Saturday and Sunday.

Workers are entitled to rest break of at least 30 minutes after at most 6 hours of work unless otherwise specified by a separate law. For young workers under 18, the minimum rest of at least 30 minutes must be provided after every four and a half hours of work. This rest time is not considered working time. Labour Code also provides for a daily rest period of 11 consecutive hours.

ILO Conventions

Convention 158 (1982) on employment termination

Estonia has not ratified the Convention 158.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

The questions under this section measure the security or even flexibility or precariousness of an employment relationship. Although these are not clearly mentioned in a single convention (severance pay and notice requirement are provided in the Termination of Employment Convention No. 158) however, the best practices in the field require that employees be provided with a written contract of employment; workers on fixed term contracts should not be hired for tasks of permanent nature; a reasonable probation period (ideally lower than or equal to 6 months) may be followed to assess the suitability of an employee; a period of notice must be specified in an employment contract before severing the employment relationship; and workers be paid severance allowance on termination of employment relationship.

A contract of employment may be oral or written however workers should be provided with a written statement of employment at the start of their employment.

Fixed Term Contract workers must not be hired for permanent tasks as it leads to precarious employment.

A reasonable probation period must be allowed to let a worker learn new skills. A newly hired employee may be fired during probation period without any negative consequences.

A reasonable notice period, depending on the length of service of an employee, may be required before an employer may sever the employment relationship.

Employers may be required to pay a severance allowance on termination of employment (due to redundancy or any other reason except for lack of capacity or misconduct).
Regulations on employment security:
- Employment Contracts Act
- Unemployment Insurance Act

Written Employment Particulars

Employment Contracts Act has provision with regard to the written employment contracts and written employment particulars.

Employment contracts are required to be in writing except in cases where duration of an employment contract does not exceed two weeks. A written employment contract must contain following information: personal information of the employer and employee; commencement date of an employment contract; job description; agreed wages; wage period and pay day; taxes and payments withheld by the employer; workplace; working time; duration of annual leave; contract termination notice period; reference to the rules of work organization as well as applicable collective agreement.

Employer is required to communicate this information to the worker in good faith, clearly and unambiguously before work is started. If an employer does not communicate this information before commencement of employment, he may demand it at any time and employer would be obligated to communicate such information within two weeks of the receipt of such request. If there is a change in the employment contract, such change will be communicated to the worker in writing within one month of making such change. Employer is required to keep record of employment contract during the term of validity of employment contract and for ten years after the expiry of employment contract.

Employers are also required to indicate probation period as well duration of a fixed term employment contract and reasons for entry into a fixed term contract.

Sources: §5 & 6 of Employment Contracts Act

Fixed Term Contracts

Employment Contracts Act has provisions with regard to the fixed term contracts.

Employment contracts are usually concluded for an unspecified term (indefinite term contracts). A fixed-term contract may be entered into for up to five years (60 months) if it is justified by good reasons arising from the temporary fixed term characteristics of the work, especially a temporary increase in the work volume or performance of seasonal work. Fixed term contracts can also be concluded for replacement of an employee who is temporarily absent.

If the work duties are performed by way of temporary agency work, an employment contract may be entered for a specified term if it is justified by the temporary characteristics of work in a user undertaking.
The maximum length of a single fixed term contract is five years. However, if the parties, on more than two consecutive occasions entered into a fixed term employment contract for the performance of similar work or extended the fixed term contract for more than once in five years, the employment relationship is deemed to have been indefinite/unspecified from the start.

Moreover, fixed term contract is deemed consecutive if the time between the expiry of one fixed term contract and the next contract does not exceed two months.

Renewal is allowed only once for fixed term contracts.

The maximum length of a single fixed term contract is five years and since fixed term contracts can be renewed once, the maximum length, including renewals, is 10 years.

Sources: §9 & 10 of Employment Contracts Act

Probation Period

The provisions on probation period are found in the Employment Contracts Act.

The aim of a probationary period is to assess whether an employee's health, knowledge, skills, abilities and personal characteristics correspond to the level required for performance of the work. Maximum length of probationary period is 4 months (120 days). The parties to an employment contract may agree on the shortening of probationary period from four months or even the non-applicability of probation period.

For fixed term contracts of up to eight months, the probationary period may not be longer than half of the contract term.

Law does not differentiate between the job types and a single type of probationary period is applied for all types of work although parties have the option to shorten such period.

Sources: §6 & 86 of Employment Contracts Act

Notice Requirement

Employment Contracts Act has relevant provisions on termination of an employment contract and required advance notice periods. Employment contracts are terminated either by agreement between the parties; on expiry of its term (for fixed term contracts); on cancellation of a contract by either of the parties on the bases provided under the law; and on the death of an employee.
An employee may terminate an employment contract both ordinarily and extraordinarily however in the case of ordinary contract termination, worker has to give advance notice of at least 30 days. On the other hand, employer cannot terminate an employment on an ordinary basis. There must be extraordinary reasons leading to the termination of an employment contract. These reasons are either employee related reasons (related to a worker's conduct, worker's capacity) or economic reasons.

The employee related reasons include inability of worker to perform his work for a long time because of his state of health, resulting in the inability of the worker to continue an employment contract (a decrease in the employee’s capacity to work because of his state of health); inability to perform his work duties for a long time because of insufficient work skills, non-suitability for the job or inadaptability, which prevents the employment contract from continuing (a decrease in the employee’s capacity to work); disregard of the employer’s reasonable instructions or breach of his duties; appearance at the workplace in a state of intoxication; commission of a theft, fraud or an act bringing about the loss of the employer's trust in the employee; bringing about a third party’s distrust in the employer; damage to the employer's property and threat of such damage; and violation of an obligation to maintain confidentiality in trade secrets.

The economic reasons include a decrease in the volume of work, a reorganization of work or other cessation of work; a cessation of the employer’s activities; and a declaration of the employer’s insolvency.

An employee may also terminate an employment contract extraordinarily if taking into account all circumstances and mutual interests, further continuation in the employment related obligations are no longer desirable. An employee may terminate an employment contract if employer has breached a fundamental obligation especially if the employer has degraded the employee or threatened to do so or allowed employee's colleagues or third parties to do so; employer has delayed the payment of wages; and in cases where continuance of work is a real threat to the employee's life, health, morals or good name. An employee may also terminate an employment contract extraordinarily if employee’s state of health or family responsibilities don't allow him to perform agreed work and employer does not provide the worker with other suitable work.

An employer however cannot terminate an employment contract in the following cases: if an employee is pregnant or has the right to pregnancy and maternity leave; if an employee is required to perform important family duties; if an employee does not, in the short term, cope with the performance of his or her duties as a result of his or her state of health; if an employee lawfully represents other employees; if a full-time employee does not want to work part time or if a part-time employee does not want to work full time; and if an employee is in military service or an alternative service, such asocial care, rescue service or emergency service.

An employment contract may be terminated during the probationary period by giving at least 15 days of notice. In the event of extraordinary contract termination, an employer has to observe the following notice period: at least 15 calendar days for less than one year of employment; at least 30 calendar days for one to five years of employment; at least 60 calendar days for five to ten years of employment; and at least 90 calendar days for ten and more years of employment.

An employer may not adhere to the notice period requirement if an employer considers that performance of contract has become impossible even until the expiry of notice (only in the event of employee related reasons). A collective agreement may set notice periods differently than what are provided above.

An employee may terminate an employment contract both ordinarily and extraordinarily however in the case of ordinary contract termination, worker has to give advance notice of at least 30 days.

Compensation in lieu of notice is allowed. If an employer or an employee gives advance notice of cancellation later than provided by law or a collective agreement, the employee or the employer has the right to receive compensation to the extent to which they would have had the right to obtain upon following the term of advance notice.

Severance Pay

There is no general right to severance pay under Estonian Legislation. Employment Contracts Act has relevant provisions on the right to severance pay.

Severance pay is not allowed in the event of individual dismissals. The law provides for severance pay in the event of economic dismissals and an employee is entitled to one month's wages upon termination of employment contract due to a lay-off. In the case of lay-off, redundancy pay is one month's wages and it does not increase with increase in the length of service. If a fixed term contract is terminated for economic reasons (except in the case of employer's bankruptcy), employer is required to pay wages to the employee that he would have been entitled to until the expiry of contract term however no compensation is payable if contract is terminated due to force majeure. If an employee terminates an employment contract extraordinarily, employer is entitled to compensation to the extent of three months' average wages to the employee. A court or labour dispute committee may however change the amount of compensation considering the circumstances of contract termination and interests of both parties.

In the event of termination for economic reasons, the Estonian Unemployment Insurance Fund pays an additional compensation to the employee which varies according to the employee's length of service, in the following manner: One month's wages for five to ten years of service; and two months' wages for over ten years of service. There was third option of three months' wages for more than 20 years of service however it was applicable only until 31st December 2014.

ILO Conventions

Convention 156: Workers with Family Responsibilities Convention (1981)
Recommendation 165: Workers with Family Responsibilities (1981)

Estonia has not ratified the Convention 156.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

Paternity leave is for the new fathers around the time of childbirth and is usually of shorter duration.

Recommendation (No. 165) provides for parental leave as an option available to either parent to take long leave of absence (paid or unpaid) without resigning from work. Parental leave is usually taken once the maternity and paternity leave have been exhausted. For working parents, laws may define the portion of parental leave that has to be compulsorily taken by fathers or mothers.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance Recommendation 165 asks the employers to look into the measures for improving general working conditions through flexible work arrangements.
Regulations on family responsibilities:

- Employment Contracts Act
- Parental Benefits Act

Paternity Leave

The provisions on paternity leave are found in the Employment Contracts Act.

New fathers are entitled to paternity leave for 10 working days. All employed fathers with temporary or permanent contracts are eligible for paternity leave. There is flexibility in the use of this leave since employees can decide to take this leave during two months before or two months after the birth of a child.

The paternity leave is fully paid leave with a limit of three times average earnings. The paternity leave is funded from the general taxation.

The paternity leave has increased from 10 to 30 calendars days. The leave can be taken for the period between prior to the estimated due date assigned by doctor or midwife until the child reaches three years of age. The supplementary parental allowance will be given to the fathers which is calculated in the same way as parental benefit. The law has been enforced from 1 July, 2020.

The father is also entitled to supplementary parental allowance in case of still birth.

Parental Leave

Parental leave is provided under Employment Contracts Act and Parental Benefits Act.

Parental leave is available until a child reaches three years of age. However, this is entitlement per family. Parental leave may be used in one part or in several parts at any time until a child is three years of age.

The parental leave is partially paid in the sense that parental benefit is paid at 100% of the average earnings for 435 days (62 weeks) from after the end of maternity leave. The minimum benefit paid to the workers in 2017 is minimum wage. For those parents who are neither working nor on parental leave, parental benefit is paid from the birth of a child at the flat rate until the child reaches 18 months of age. There is also provision for a flat rate child care benefit paid from the end of parental benefit until the child reaches three years of age.

The parental benefit and child care benefit are funded from general taxation and are thus paid by the employer.

An amendment in the Employment Contracts Act, applicable from July 2018, guarantees additional leave days for employees who have to care for a family member with a disability. Earlier, the additional leave was granted only to the parents with children.
with disabilities. The new leave includes 5 consecutive working days and must be used during the calendar year. The timing of the leave must be agreed with the employer. The leave is financed through the state budget.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance

There is no clear provision in the law on flexible working time for parents of minor children.
ILO Conventions

An earlier Convention (103 from 1952) prescribed at least 12 weeks maternity leave, 6 weeks before and 6 weeks after birth. However, a later convention (No. 183 from year 2000) requires that maternity leave be at least 14 weeks of which a period of six weeks compulsory leave should be after childbirth.

Estonia has not ratified the Conventions 103 & 183.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be entitled to medical and midwife care without any additional cost.

During pregnancy and while breastfeeding, a worker should be exempt from work that might bring harm to you or your baby.

The total maternity leave should last at least 14 weeks.

During maternity leave, a worker’s income should amount to at least two thirds of your preceding salary.

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be protected from dismissal or any other discriminatory treatment.

Workers have the right to return to same or equivalent position after availing maternity leave.

After childbirth and on re-joining work, a worker must be allowed paid nursing breaks for breast-feeding the child.
Regulations on maternity and work:

- Employment Contracts Act
- 2009 Regulation on Occupational health and safety requirements for work of pregnant and breastfeeding women as amended in 2015
- Health Insurance Act
- Occupational Safety and Health Act

Free Medical Care

Medical care is provided under the national health care system.

Pregnant women have the right to health care from the moment pregnancy is medically determined without having to pay social tax. There is no qualifying period for employees although the duration of employment contract must exceed one month.

Patient has to do the cost-sharing and pay some nominal fees for availing some services however pre-natal care, confinement and post-natal care is totally free for all women in Estonia.

No Harmful Work

Provisions with regard to occupational safety and health of pregnant and breastfeeding workers are found in Employment Contracts Act and special Regulation issued under the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

In accordance with Regulation on Occupational health and safety requirements for work of pregnant and breastfeeding women, an employer is obliged to assess the risks to the health and safety of a female worker (pregnant and breastfeeding worker) in a workplace. An employer may take following measures to ensure safety of a pregnant and breastfeeding worker by temporary facilitation of working conditions; change in the work organization including shortening of work time and enabling of suitable breaks; temporary transfer to easier, other or day time job.

A pregnant employee has the right to demand from the employer to temporarily provide her with the work corresponding to her state of health if the employee's state of health does not allow for performance of duties agreed in the employment contract. If the employer is unable to provide suitable alternative work, an employee may temporarily refuse to perform the duties. In such cases, employee is paid compensation in accordance with the conditions under Health Insurance Act.

An employee may also submit a medical certificate from a doctor or a midwife indicating the restrictions on work due to her state of health and any proposals regarding duties and working conditions corresponding to her state of health. Pregnant workers may not be involved in work involving high air pressure conditions, lead and its components and underground work.

Maternity Leave

Maternity leave is provided under the Employment Contracts Act.

Maternity leave is 140 calendar days (20 weeks). Between 30 to 70 days of leave can be taken before birth and remaining leave can be taken after birth. If less than 30 days of leave is taken before birth, maternity leave is shortened accordingly.

There is some flexibility in the use of maternity leave since workers can take either half of the maternity leave (70 days) before birth or at least 30 days before birth and remaining 110 days after birth. However, if a worker takes less than 30 days before birth (say 20 days), her post-natal leave won't be 120 days. Rather it will be 110 days and she will lose ten days of her leave.

The parents who adopt a child under 10 years of age also have the right to adoptive parent leave of 70 calendar days. There is no extension in maternity leave in the event of multiple births or in the case of ill health.

Sources: §59 of Employment Contracts Act

Income

Women workers have the right to receive compensation for maternity leave under the Health Insurance Act.

Workers are paid their full wages (100%) while they are on maternity leave or adoptive parent leave. The maternity benefit and adoption benefit are part of the temporary incapacity for work benefit. The compensation is paid for the full term of maternity leave, i.e., 140 days and adoption leave, i.e., 70 days.

Both the maternity benefit and adoption benefit are paid under the Health Insurance Act and paid through Health Insurance Fund funded through health insurance contributions of employers although managed by the government.

From 1 April 2022, parents will be entitled to shared parental benefits in the event of still birth.

The mother who is not entitled to maternity benefit would be eligible for the parental benefit from the date of birth till 30 consecutive days thereafter. The health insurance would be provided to the mother during this period.

Protection from Dismissals

Protection from dismissals during pregnancy and maternity leave is guaranteed under Employment Contracts Act. Employers are prohibited from terminating employment contract of a worker who is pregnant or has the right to pregnancy and maternity leave. If an employer terminates an employee who is pregnant or raising a child under three years of age, it is deemed that the employment contract is terminated unfairly unless the employer proves that it cancelled the employment contract on a basis allowed under the Act.

Employers are required not to terminate an employee who is pregnant or women who has the right to maternity leave or a person on child care leave or adoptive parent leave due to lay-off except upon cessation of business activities by the employer or declaration of employer's bankruptcy. A pregnant employee or a person who has right to maternity leave cannot be terminated due to a decreased capacity for work.

Right to Return to Same Position

A worker's right to return after availing maternity leave is guaranteed under the Employment Contracts Act.

The law prohibits an employer from dismissing an employee who is pregnant or on maternity leave. Similarly, at the end of maternity leave, women workers have the right to improved working conditions (increase in wages, better provisions under a collective agreement) which she would be entitled to if she was not on leave.

Breastfeeding/ Nursing Breaks

Breastfeeding breaks are provided under the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Breastfeeding mothers with a child under 18 months can take either a 30-minute breastfeeding break every three hours or a 60-minute break per day. If there are two or more children, the breastfeeding break is at least one hour.

Nursing breaks are provided until a child reaches 18 months of age. The nursing breaks are paid breaks and paid through the state budget funds.

ILO Conventions

Most ILO OSH Conventions deal with very specific Occupational Safety hazards, such as asbestos and chemicals. Convention 155 (1981) is the relevant general convention here.
Labour Inspection Convention: 81 (1947)

Estonia has ratified the Convention 81 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The employer, in all fairness, should make sure that the work process is safe.
The employer should provide protective clothing and other necessary safety precautions for free.
Workers should receive training in all work-related safety and health aspects and must have been shown the emergency exits.
In order to ensure workplace safety and health, a central, independent and efficient labour inspection system should be present.
Regulations on health and safety:
- Occupational Safety and Health Act
- Statutes of the Labour Inspectorate, Regulation No. 26

Employer Cares

An employer is required to protect the health and safety of workers at the workplace in accordance with the provisions of Occupational Safety and Health Act.

An employer and employees are required to co-operate in the name of a safe working environment. Employer is required to implement measures to prevent health risks arising from physical, chemical, biological, physiological and psychological hazards. Employers are required to ensure the conformity with the occupational health and safety requirements in every work-related situation. Employers are further required to apply measures provided for in the employment contract and collective agreements to prevent damage to the health and safety of employees and neutralize the effect of above-mentioned hazards.

The amended law has incorporated the physiological hazards and psychosocial factors. The law defined physiological hazards as “the severity of physical work, repetition of the same type of movement and forced postures and movements at work that cause fatigue and other similar factors that can cause health damage over time”. To mitigate this hazard, employer should provide breaks to the employee during the working time. Employer should assign work to the employee by taking into account their characteristics (i.e. physical, mental, gender, age) and capacity.

The psychosocial factors are those “that may present a risk of accident or violence, unequal treatment, bullying and harassment at work, work incapacitated by the worker's ability, long-term work alone and monotonous work, including work-related stress”.

Law further requires that to render first aid, employer must hire one first aid worker in accordance with the number of employees, the frequency of health damage (workplace accidents), regional division of the enterprise and nature of the activity.

Free Protection

The right to personal protective equipment (PPE) is guaranteed under the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

If the risk of an accident or illness cannot be avoided or if a working environment hazard cannot be brought into conformity by applying technical means of collective protection or work-related organizational measure, employer is required to provide employees with personal protective equipment. Employers are under obligation to provide, at their own expense, an employee with personal protective equipment, special work clothes, and cleaning and washing means if the nature of work so requires, and arrange training for the employee in the use of personal protective equipment. Employees have the right to demand that an employer provides working conditions and collective and personal protective equipment conforming to the occupational health and safety requirements. Employees are also under obligation to make correct use of the prescribed personal protective equipment and keep it in working order.

Training

Occupational Safety and Health Act requires employers to provide training to the workers on OSH related issues. An employer is under obligation to arrange for the employee to receive occupational health and safety instructions and training corresponding to the employee’s position and occupation before an employee commences work or changes jobs. Such instruction or training is repeated if the work equipment or technology is changed or upgraded. Employers are also required to prepare and approve safety instructions for the work to be carried out and for the work equipment used, and give instructions to an employee to prevent contamination of the environment.

If a workplace contains danger areas where there is a risk of an accident or damage to health, the said areas are marked and appropriate measures are taken to prevent employees who have not received special instruction or special training or other persons from entering those areas. However, if it is necessary to enter a danger area, it may be done only in the presence of an employee who has received special instruction or training. Employer is required to ensure that only an employee who has received appropriate special instruction or special training works in a danger area or that work is performed under the supervision of such employee.

Employees are also under obligation to ensure in accordance with his training and the employer’s instructions that his work is not harmful to his or her own life or health or that of other persons, and does not contaminate the environment.

ILO Conventions

Convention 102 (1952), Conventions 121 (1964) and 130 (1969) concerning Social Security, Employment Injury Benefits and Medical Care and Sickness Benefits

Estonia has not ratified the above-mentioned Conventions.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

A worker’s rights to work and income should be protected when illness strikes. The national labour law may provide that sickness benefit may not be paid during the first 3 days of your absence. Minimally, a worker should be entitled to an income during first 6 months of illness. This income should be at least 45 per cent of the minimum wage. (Countries are free to opt for a system which guarantees 60 per cent of the last wages during the first 6 months of illness or even during the first year). A worker must be entitled to paid sick leave.

During illness, a worker should be entitled to medical care without any additional cost. Employees and their family members should have access to the necessary minimal medical care at an affordable cost.

During the first 6 months of illness, a worker should not be fired.

If a worker is disabled due to an occupational disease or accident, he/she must receive a higher benefit. In the case of temporary or total incapacity/disability, a worker may at least be provided 50% of his average wage while in the case of fatal injury, the survivors may be provided with 40% of the deceased worker’s average wage in periodical payments.
Regulations on sick leave & Employment Injury Benefits:
- Health Insurance Act
- Employment Contracts Act
- State Pension Insurance Act

Income

Paid sick leave is provided under the Health Insurance Act. In case of temporary incapacity for work, the medical doctor issues to the person a sick leave certificate. The sick leave certificate allows the worker to be free from executing the work and service obligations.

The sick leave certificate is presented to the employer, who presents this with other relevant documents to the Estonian Health Insurance Fund.

The first three days of sick leave are not compensated by the Health Insurance Fund or by the employer. From the fourth to the eighth day of sick leave, employer is obligated to pay 70% of the worker's salary. From the ninth day onward, employee receives compensation from the Estonian Health Insurance Fund. The cash benefit (100% in the case of occupational disease or injury) is paid until the end of the sick leave, as indicated on the medical certificate, but for not more than 182 consecutive calendar days per illness. In the case of tuberculosis, the benefit may be paid for up to 240 consecutive calendar days.

In view of the above, it can be concluded that paid sick is 182 calendar days in Estonia.

Medical Care

Medical care is provided under the national health care system.

Workers and self-employed have to pay social tax in order to avail health care facilities. There is no qualifying period for employees although the duration of employment contract must exceed one month. Patient has to do the cost-sharing and pay some nominal fees for availing some services.

Services include consultations with general practitioners and specialists; laboratory tests; preventive check-ups; outpatient and inpatient tests and procedures; and hospital care (including nursing care and medication).

The health insurance system also covers the prescribed medication which is available at reduced prices.
Job Security

The Employment Contracts Act has provisions on employment security for sick workers. Employers are prohibited from terminating the employment contract of a worker who is unable, in short term, to perform his duties due to his state of health. The limit to this "short term" is four months. And an employer is allowed to extraordinarily terminate an employment contract of a worker who is unable to perform his duties for a long time due to his state of health. This is also referred to as decrease in the worker's capacity due to state of health. This decrease in capacity is assumed if the employee's state of health does not allow for performance of duties over four months.

It can be safely concluded that employment of a worker is not secure during the first six months of illness. Rather it is secure only during the first four months. Sickness benefit may be paid for 182 days (six months) however employment of a worker is secure only for 120 days.

Disability / Work Injury Benefit

Work Injury/Temporary Incapacity for work benefits in Estonia are guaranteed under Health Insurance Act and State Pension Insurance Act.

The benefit rate in the case of an accident at work or occupational disease is 100% of reference earnings. However, the Health Insurance Fund is entitled to claim the difference from the liable employer. Apart from this, the same rules apply as for other sickness benefits in cash.

In the event of permanent work incapacity as a result of a workplace accident or occupational disease, a work incapacity pension (similar to invalidity pension) is granted and paid under the State pension insurance scheme. No qualification period is applicable.

In the event of death, the employer is obliged to meet the cost of the funeral. The survivors 'benefits are equal to Dependents' / Survivors' Benefit explained under a different section.

Please refer to the sections on invalidity benefit and dependents' / survivors' benefit.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

In the normal circumstances, the pensionable age may not be set higher than 65 years of age. If retirement age is fixed above 65 years, it should give “due regard to the working ability of elderly persons” and “demographic, economic and social criteria, which shall be demonstrated statistically”. Pension can be set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

When the breadwinner has died, the spouse and children are entitled to a benefit, expressed as a percentage of the minimum wage, or a percentage of the earned wage. This must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

For a limited period of time, the unemployed has a right to unemployment benefit set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Invalidity benefit is provided when a protected person is unable to engage in a gainful employment, before standard retirement age, due to a non-occupational chronic condition resulting in disease, injury or disability. Invalidity Benefit must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

Pension Rights

Pension rights in Estonia are guaranteed under "Old-Age Pensions under Unfavourable Conditions Act, Superannuation Pension Act, State Pension Insurance Act, and Funded Pensions Act".

Normal Retirement age (pension eligibility age) is 63 years for men and will reach 63 years for women from 2016. Worker must have at least 15 calendar years of contributions to earn a pension. The retirement age for men and women will rise gradually from 2017 to 2026 until it reaches the age of 65 years.

The permanent residents of Estonia as well as the foreigners with temporary residence permits are eligible for an old-age pension.

There is provision for both early retirement and late retirement. The pensionable age for early retirement is 60 years with the condition that individual retires and 15-year qualification period is met. Pension is reduced by 4.8% for each year that a worker retires early. Old age pension can be deferred however no age limit for deferred pension is provided under the law. By deferring pension after the normal pension age, worker earns an increment of 10.8% per year.

The Old-age pension consists of three components: the basic flat rate amount; a component calculated on the basis of years of pensionable service, the amount of which equals the number of years of pensionable service multiplied by the value of a year of pensionable service; and an insurance component, the amount of which equals the sum of the annual factors of an insured person multiplied by the value of a year of pensionable service.

There is also provision for a National Pension which is available to those 63 years old who do not qualify for a social insurance old-age pension. However, they must have resided in Estonia for at least five years before applying for benefits and must not be receiving pension from any other country.

Dependents' / Survivors' Benefit

Dependents' / Survivors' Benefitting Estonia are guaranteed under State Pension Insurance Act.

Upon the death of a provider, family members who were maintained by the person have the right to receive a survivor’s pension. Survivor’s pension is granted to the children, parents and the widow or widower irrespective of whether they were maintained by the provider or not.

The survivor pension can be calculated on the basis of the greater of the following two pensions: old-age pension calculated on the basis of the provider’s accumulation period and insurance components; or old-age pension if the person has completed thirty years of pensionable service.

The actual amount of survivor’s pension depends on the number of family members eligible for survivors' benefit. It is 100% of the old-age pension for three or more eligible family members; 80% for two family members; and 50% in the case of one family member.

Unemployment Benefits

Unemployment benefits are guaranteed under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

In the event of unemployment, two kinds of benefits are provided. Unemployment Insurance Benefit, provided under the Unemployment Insurance Act, is earnings related and is financed through contributions to a compulsory insurance scheme. Those who don't meet the conditions of unemployment insurance benefit or have already exhausted their right to the benefit are eligible for flat rate Unemployment Allowance provided under the Labour Market Services and Benefits Act and funded through the general state budget.

An applicant for unemployment insurance benefit must have paid unemployment contributions for at least 12 of the last 36 months. A claimant for unemployment insurance benefit must be involuntarily unemployed; not actively working; be available for full time work; be aged between 16 years and pensionable age; be registered as unemployed; and be actively seeking employment.

Unemployment insurance benefit is 50% of the previous earnings (average earnings of first 9 months in the last one year) up to a maximum of three times the national average during the first 100 days of unemployment and 40% of the reference earnings in the later days.
The duration of benefit is expressed as a number of days during which an unemployed person can receive the unemployment insurance benefit. This number of days depends on a person's “insurance period”, which takes into account all the months during which unemployment insurance contributions have been paid.

An insured person has the right to receive an unemployment insurance benefit during the whole period when he or she is registered as unemployed, but not longer than 180 calendar days if the insurance period is shorter than 5 years; 270 calendar days if the insurance period is 5–10 years; and 360 calendar days if the insurance period is 10 years or longer.

The unemployment allowance is paid to the unemployed persons who do not qualify for unemployment insurance benefit, who actively seek work, who have worked during the last 180 days or have finished full time studies (there are many other exceptions) or whose income is less support for the unemployed 31-fold daily rate. The involuntary unemployment requirement also does not apply. The Unemployment Allowance is paid for 210 to 270 days. It is paid for 210 days if an employee is extraordinarily dismissed for reasons related to insubordination, fraud, damage to the property, and violation of confidentiality agreement (section 89.1.3-8 of Employment Contract Act). In other cases, unemployment allowance is paid for a period of 270 days. The daily unemployment allowance rate for 2019 is 5.65 euros, and 31 times the daily rate of 175.15 euros (for a month).

Invalidity Benefits

Invalidity Benefits in Estonia are guaranteed under State Pension Insurance Act. All permanent residents of Estonia as well as foreigners with temporary residence are eligible for invalidity benefits.

There are two kinds of invalidity pension: the work-incapacity pension and the national pension based on incapacity to work. A work-incapacity pension is payable to residents of Estonia aged from 16 years to retirement age who have a degree of permanent work incapacity of at least 40%. To be eligible, persons aged between 25 and 62 must have accrued at least one to fourteen years of pensionable employment by the date on which the pension is granted.

Persons who have a degree of permanent work incapacity of at least 40% and who have not accrued the number of years of pensionable employment (as required above), are entitled to a national pension.
For the persons declared permanently incapacitated for work, invalidity pension is granted for the entire period of incapacity for work but not for longer than until attaining pensionable age (of 63 years). A work incapacity/invalidity pension is calculated on the basis of the higher of the following two amounts: the amount of an old-age pension calculated on the basis of the individual's actually accrued pensionable employment and pension insurance coefficients; or the amount of an old-age pension of a person who has accrued 30 years of pensionable employment. The amount of the work-incapacity pension is based on the percentage loss of work capacity, but cannot be less than the national pension rate.

ILO Conventions

Convention 111 (1958) lists the discrimination grounds which are forbidden.
Convention 100 (1952) is about Equal Remuneration for Work of Equal Value.

Estonia has ratified both Conventions 100 & 111.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, equal pay for men and women for work of equal value is a must, regardless of marital status. Pay inequality based on race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction/place of birth or social origin is also forbidden. A transparent remuneration system and the clear matching of pay and position should be in place and to help prevent wage discrimination.

Not clearly provided in ILO Conventions. However, sexual intimidation/harassment is gender discrimination.

An employer can’t discriminate against you on in any aspect of employment (appointment, promotion, training and transfer) on the basis of union membership or participation in union activities, filing of a complaint against an employer, race, colour, sex, marital status, family responsibilities, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, temporary absence due to illness, age, trade union membership, disability/HIV-AIDS, or absence from work during maternity leave. (Conventions 111, 156, 158, 159 and 183)

People have the right to work and there can’t be occupational segregation on the basis of gender.
Regulations on fair treatment:
- Gender Equality Act
- Equal Treatment Act
- Penal Code
- Employment Contracts Act

Equal Pay

The Law on Gender Equality and the Law on Equal Treatment guarantee equal pay for work of equal value.

An employer's activities are considered discriminatory if an employer establishes remuneration (or its conditions) and conditions for the provision or receipt of other benefits which are less favorable for employees of one sex compared with employees of other sex doing the same work or work of equal value.

According to the Law on Equal Treatment, discrimination of persons on the grounds of ethnic origin, race, colour, religion or other beliefs, age, disability or sexual orientation is prohibited in all employment related matters including remuneration.

Sexual Harassment

Harassment and Sexual harassment are dealt with under the Gender Equality Act and Equal Treatment Act.

The Gender Equality Act prohibits sexual harassment and harassment based on the sex of a person. Sexual harassment takes place where any form of unwanted verbal, non-verbal or physical conduct or activity of a sexual nature occurs, with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person, in particular when creating a disturbing, intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment. Harassment based on the sex of a person occurs where unwanted conduct or activity related to the sex of a person occurs with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person and of creating a disturbing, intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.

Under the Equal Treatment Act, direct discrimination includes harassment which occurs when unwanted conduct on any of the grounds mentioned in the Act takes place with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person and of creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.
Article 13 of the Gender Equality Act stipulates that if the rights of a person are violated due to discrimination, he or she may demand, from the person who violates the rights, the termination of the harmful activity and compensation for the damage on the basis of and pursuant to the procedure provided by law. It further provides that an injured party may demand that, in addition to above provisions, a reasonable amount of money be paid to the party as compensation for non-patrimonial damage caused by the violation. Upon determination of the amount of compensation, a court or a labour dispute committee may take into account, inter alia, the scope, duration and nature of the discrimination.

Under a 2017 amendment in the Penal Code, sexual harassment is defined as ‘an intentional physical act of sexual nature committed against somebody’s will with the degrading objectives or consequences”. The act is punishable by a fine of up to three hundred fine units or detention. A legal person can be held accountable for sexual harassment and may be punished with a fine of up to EUR 2000.

Non-Discrimination

Non-discrimination is guaranteed under the Constitution, Gender Equality Act and the Law on Equal Treatment. In accordance with article 12 of the Constitution, "everyone is equal before the law. No one shall be discriminated against on the basis of ethnic origin, race, colour, sex, language, origin, religion, political or other opinion, property or social status, or on other grounds. The incitement of ethnic, racial, religious or political hatred, violence or discrimination shall, by law, be prohibited and punishable. The incitement of hatred, violence or discrimination between social strata shall, by law, also be prohibited and punishable".

The Equal Treatment Act ensures the protection of persons against discrimination on the grounds of ethnic origin, race, colour, religion or other beliefs, age, disability or sexual orientation. The Equal Treatment Act “does not preclude the requirements of equal treatment in labour relations on the basis of attributes mentioned above, in particular due to family-related duties, social status, representation the interests of employees or membership in an organisation of employees, level of language proficiency or duty to serve in defence forces”. The Gender Equality Act prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex. The Equal Treatment Act also prohibits direct and indirect discrimination.

Direct discrimination based on sex also means less favourable treatment of a person in connection with pregnancy and child-birth, parenting, performance of family obligations or other circumstances related to gender, as well as gender-based harassment and sexual harassment and less favourable treatment of a person due to rejection of or submission to harassment.
In accordance with the Penal Code, unlawful restriction of the rights of a person or granting of unlawful preferences to a person on the basis of his or her nationality, race, colour, sex, language, origin, religion, sexual orientation, political opinion, financial or social status and genetic risks is punishable by a fine of up to 300 fine units or by detention.

In accordance with Employment Contracts Act, an employer has to ensure the protection of employees against discrimination, follow the principle of equal treatment and promote equality in accordance with the Equal Treatment Act and Gender Equality Act.

Equal Choice of Profession

Women workers can be employed in the same jobs as men. Employers are prohibited from establishing such conditions, upon hiring, which put persons of one sex at a particular disadvantage compared with persons of the other sex.

In accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, every citizen has the right to freely choose his or her area of activity, profession and place of work. Conditions and procedure for the exercise of this right may be provided by law. Citizens of foreign states and stateless persons who are in Estonia have this right equally with Estonian citizens, unless otherwise provided by law.

A court may deprive a convicted offender of the right to work in a certain position or operate in a certain area of activity for up to three years if the person is convicted of a criminal offence relating to abuse of professional or official status or violation of official duties.

ILO Conventions

Minimum Age: Convention 138 (1973)
Worst Forms of Child labour: Convention 182 (1999)

Estonia has ratified both Conventions 138 & 182.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, children may not be forced to perform work that could harm their health and hampers their physical and mental development.

All children should be able to attend school. Once this is safeguarded, there is no objection against children performing light jobs between the ages of 12 and 14. The general minimum age is 15 years however developing countries may set this at 14 years. The minimum age for hazardous work, work that is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, is 18 years. It can also be set at a lower level of 16 years under certain circumstances.

Children should not be employed in a work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children. It is considered one of the worst forms of child labour. The minimum age for such hazardous work is 18 years.
Regulations on minors and youth:
- Employment Contracts Act
- Occupational Safety and Health Act
- Penal Code

Minimum Age for Employment

Employment of Children is governed under Employment Contracts Act.

Minimum age for entry into employment is 15 years. The minimum age for employment is higher for children who have not completed compulsory schooling. An employer may enter into an employment contract with a minor of 13-14 years or a minor of 15-16 years subject to obligation to attend school and engage him only in light work. Minors of age 7-12 years can also be engaged in the light work in the field of art, sports, culture or advertising. Light work prescribed for minors aged 13-16 years and 7-12 years is provided in a Regulation (No. 93) issued in 2009. An employer may enter into an employment contract with a minor of 13-14 years of age for the performance of agricultural work; ancillary work performed in trade or service establishments; ancillary work performed in catering or accommodation establishments; and other work that meets the requirements provided by the law.

Employers are prohibited from allowing a minor to work without the consent or approval of a legal representative. An employer may not enter into employment contract or allow a minor to work if the work is beyond minor's physical or psychological capacity; is likely to harm the moral development; is likely to harm the minor's health due to the nature of work or the working environment; is likely to hinder the minor's social development or the acquisition of his or her education; or involves risks which the minor cannot recognize or avoid owing to the lack of experience or training.

Employers are required to create suitable working and rest conditions for employees who are minors and disabled. Upon assigning work to minors, an employer should observe the restrictions provided by legislation for ensuring their safety. While employing a minor under 15 years, employers have to notify minor and his/her legal representative of the risks related to the work of the minor and the measures implemented for the protection of his/her health and safety.

Unless parties to the contract have agreed on a shorter working time, full time work (shortened full time work) is: 2 hours a day and 12 hours a week during school year while 3 hours a day and 15 hours over a period of seven days during school vacations (for employees with 7-12 years of age); 2 hours a day and 12 hours a week during school year while 7 hours a day and 35 hours over a period of seven days during school vacations (for employees with 13-14 years of age or subject to obligation to attend school); 6 hours a day and 30 hours over a period of seven days (for employees with 15 years of age and not subject to the obligation to attend school); and 7 hours a day and 35 hours over a period of seven days (for employees with 16 years of age and not subject to the obligation to attend school, and an employee who is 17 years of age). The school leaving age is 15 years in Estonia. The maximum school leaving age is 17 years.

An employer enters into an employment contract with a minor without the consent of a legal representative and allowing a minor to work without the consent of a labour inspector is punishable by a fine of up to 100 fine units. If a legal person commits this act, he is punishable by a fine of up to 1,300 euros.

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work

Employment of children is governed under Employment Contracts Act. The minimum age for hazardous work is 18 years.

Overtime work is prohibited for minors and any overtime work agreement with a minor is void. Night work is also prohibited for minors. An agreement where a minor undertakes to perform work from 20:00 to 06:00 is void. However, this prohibition is not applicable if a minor is involved in light work in the field of culture, art, sports or advertising under the supervision of an adult from 20:00 to 24:00.

A person who influences a person under 18 years of age to work under unusual conditions is punishable by two to ten years' imprisonment.

In accordance with a Regulation Prohibiting Work involving Occupational Hazards (No. 94 issued in 2009), the hazardous works prohibited for minor workers include physical hazards, chemical and biological hazards, hazards in the production process and other works. Underground work, work on heights and work on repair or maintenance work on the elevator is prohibited for minor workers.

ILO Conventions

Forced labour: Conventions 29 (1930)
Abolition of Forced labour: Conventions 105 (1957)
Forced labour is the work one has to perform under threat of punishment: forfeit of wages, dismissal, harassment or violence, even corporal punishment. Forced labour means violation of human rights.

Estonia has ratified both Conventions 29 & 105.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Except for certain cases, forced or compulsory labour (exacted under the threat of punishment and for which you may not have offered voluntarily) is prohibited.

Employers have to allow workers to look for work elsewhere. If a worker is looking for work elsewhere, he/she should not be shortened on wages or threatened with dismissal. (In the reverse cases, international law considers this as forced labour).

If the total working hours, inclusive of overtime exceed 56 hours per week, the worker is considered to be working under inhumane working conditions.
Regulations on forced labour:
- Penal Code
- Employment Contracts Act

Prohibition on Forced and Compulsory Labour

Constitution and Penal Code prohibit forced labour. In accordance with article 29 of the Constitution, "no one shall be compelled to perform work or service against his or her free will, except service in the armed forces or alternative service, work to prevent the spread of an infectious disease, work in the case of a natural disaster or a catastrophe, and work which a convict must perform on the basis of and pursuant to procedure established by law".

In accordance with section 133 of the Penal Code, placing a person in a situation where he or she is forced to work under unusual conditions, engage in prostitution, beg, commit a criminal offence or perform other disagreeable duties, or keeping a person in such situation, if such act is performed through deprivation of liberty, violence, deceit, threatening to cause damage, by taking advantage of dependence on another person, helpless or vulnerable situation of the person, is punishable by 1 to 7 years' imprisonment. The punishment may be increased to 3 to 15 years imprisonment in certain cases.

A person who influences a person under 18 years of age to work under unusual conditions is punishable by two to ten years' imprisonment.

Freedom to Change Jobs and Right to Quit

Employment Contracts Act gives a worker freedom to change jobs and the right to quit.

In accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, every citizen has the right to freely choose his or her area of activity, profession and place of work. Conditions and procedure for the exercise of this right may be provided by law. Citizens of foreign states and stateless persons who are in Estonia have this right equally with Estonian citizens, unless otherwise provided by law.

In the event of ordinary cancellation of employment contract, employee is required to give 30 days of notice to the employer. In the event of extraordinary contract termination, notice is not required.

Source: §98 of the Employment Contracts Act
Inhuman Working Conditions

Employment Contracts Act has provision on working time.

The general working hours in Estonia are 40 hours a week. The maximum working hours (including overtime) are 48 hours. Thus, overtime hours are 8 hours a week.
ILO Conventions

Freedom of association and protection of the right to organize: Convention 87 (1948)
Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining: Convention 98 (1949)

Estonia has ratified both Conventions 87 & 98.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Freedom of association means freedom to join a trade union. This is part of the fundamental human rights. Employees may not be put at a disadvantage when they are active in the trade union outside working hours. The list of exclusions for sectors of economic activity and workers in an organization should be short.

Trade unions are entitled to negotiate with employers on term of employment without hindrance. The freedom of a trade union to negotiate with employers to try and conclude collective agreements is protected. (The ILO has a special procedure for handling complaints from unions about violation of this principle).

Workers have the right to strike in order to defend their social and economic interests. It is incidental and corollary to the right to organize provided in ILO convention 87.
Regulations on trade unions:
- Trade Union Act
- Collective Agreements Act
- Collective Labour Dispute Resolution Act

Freedom to Join and Form a Union

Freedom of Association is guaranteed under the Constitution of Estonia and Trade Union Act.

In accordance with article 29 of the Constitution, "everyone may freely belong to unions and federations of employees and employers. Unions and federations of employees and employers may uphold their rights and lawful interests by means which are not prohibited by law. The conditions and procedure for the exercise of the right to strike shall be provided by law. The procedure for resolution of labour disputes shall be provided by law."

Workers have the right to freely found and join, or not to join, trade unions without prior approval however members of the Defence Forces who are in active service are prohibited from founding or joining a union. Trade unions also have the right to form federations and confederations to represent the rights and interests of employees. Trade unions function independent of employer or state influence.

At least five members are needed to found a union. The same number of unions (five) is needed to found a federation as well as confederation. A trade union has to be registered and registration departments/registrars of country courts maintain a register of trade unions located in their jurisdiction.

Trade unions are competent to enter into collective agreements or other contracts pertaining to employment, service or social affairs with the employers and state authorities; submission of proposals to the government for amendment of legislation regulating social and employment issues; submission of proposals on draft legislation on issues of interest to the workers; co-operation with state employment services on training and skilling of workers; participation in informing and consulting employees; and representation and protection of trade union members in dispute resolution bodies.

The rights of an employee and an applicant for employment cannot be restricted on the ground of their membership or non-membership of a trade union. An employee's rights are restricted if, due to trade union membership or activities, if: an employee is not allowed to work; an employee is fired; the working conditions of an employee are impaired; remuneration or wages are reduced or not paid; or an employee is treated unequally.
Trade union density is 10.7% in Estonia and there are two main federations for blue-collar and white-collar workers. The Estonian Trade Union Confederation (EAKL), the trade union organization for blue-collar workers, is the largest trade union confederation and is the main partner in national minimum wage negotiations. The Estonian Employees' Unions' Confederation (TALO), the trade union organization for white-collar workers, represents cultural workers and public servants. According to a 2009 survey, unions are present in nearly 6% of the enterprises employing five or more workers.

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

Right to collective bargaining is guaranteed under the Constitution of Estonia and Collective Agreements Act.

In accordance with article 29 of the Constitution, "unions and federations of employees and employers may uphold their rights and lawful interests by means which are not prohibited by law. The conditions and procedure for the exercise of the right to strike shall be provided by law. The procedure for resolution of labor disputes shall be provided by law."

A collective agreement is a voluntary agreement between employees/union and the employer or employer association. Collective agreements can be both bilateral and trilateral (tripartite). A collective agreement is applicable to the parties concluding it however it is extendable to others as well. The scope of extension is determined under the collective agreement. The Ministry of Social Affairs maintains a database of concluded agreements and all collective agreements are registered in the database. The procedure for the registration of collective agreements and amendment of data is established by a regulation of the minister responsible for the field.

Collective agreements are concluded in writing and are usually in force for one year unless the parties have agreed otherwise. During the term of the collective agreement, both the parties are under peace obligation not to declare a strike or lockout. A collective agreement may be concluded between the parties to determine wage conditions, working conditions, conditions of work and rest, terms relating to contract termination for workers, staff redundancy terms, vocational training and assistance for the unemployed, health and safety conditions and other necessary information.

The Estonian Economic and Social Council was established in 1999. It has 18 members with 6 members each from worker, employer and government side. Five of the government nominees are actually independent experts. The term of the Council is three years and is renewable.

Right to Strike

Right to strike is guaranteed under the Constitution of Estonia and Collective Labour Disputes Resolution Act.

In accordance with article 29 of the Constitution, “the conditions and procedure for the exercise of the right to strike shall be provided by law. The procedure for resolution of labour disputes shall be provided by law.”

The right of trade unions to organise a strike and the right of employers to lock out employees to resolve a labour dispute arises only if there is no prohibition against disruption of work in force, if conciliation procedures have failed in resolving the issue, if an agreement is not complied with, or if a court order is not executed. A decision to organise a strike is made by a general meeting of employees or a union or federation of employees. Organisers of a strike (or lock-out) are required to notify the other party, a conciliator and the local government of a planned strike or lock-out in writing at least two weeks in advance. Warning Strikes (for the maximum duration of one hour) and Support Strikes (for the maximum duration of three days in support of striking workers) are allowed under the Law. Participation in a strike is voluntary. It is prohibited to impede the performance of work by employees who do not want to participate in a strike.

 Strikes are prohibited in government agencies and other state bodies and local governments, defence forces, other national defence organizations, courts, and firefighting and rescue services. Collective labour disputes have to be resolved in these organizations through the mediation of a conciliator or in court. In essential service (enterprises and agencies which satisfy the primary needs of the population and economy), a minimum level of service/production has to be maintained during collective labour dispute.

If your score is between 1 - 18

This score is unbelievable! Does your employer know we live in the 21st century? Ask for your rights. If there is a union active in your company or branch of industry, join it and appeal for help.

If your score is between 19 - 38

As you can see, there is ample room for improvement. But please don’t tackle all these issues at once. Start where it hurts most. In the meantime, notify your union or WageIndicator about your situation, so they may help to improve it. When sending an email to us, please be specific about your complaint and if possible name your employer as well. Also, try and find out if your company officially adheres to a code known as Corporate Social Responsibility. If they do, they should live up to at least ILO standards. If they don’t adhere to such a code yet, they should. Many companies do by now. You may bring this up.

If your score is between 39 - 49

You’re pretty much out of the danger zone. Your employer adheres to most of the existing labour laws and regulations. But there is always room for improvement. So next time you talk to management about your work conditions, prepare well and consult this DecentWorkCheck as a checklist.
