Your personal score tells how much your employer lives up to national legal standards regarding work. To calculate your DecentWorkCheck, you must accumulate 1 point for each YES answer marked. Then compare it with the values in Table below:

is your amount of "YES" accumulated.

Saudi Arabia scored 31 times "YES" on 49 questions related to International Labour Standards

If your score is between 1 - 18

This score is unbelievable! Does your employer know we live in the 21st century? Ask for your rights. If there is a union active in your company or branch of industry, join it and appeal for help.

If your score is between 19 - 38

As you can see, there is ample room for improvement. But please don't tackle all these issues at once. Start where it hurts most. In the meantime, notify your union or WageIndicator about your situation, so they may help to improve it. When sending an email to us, please be specific about your complaint and if possible name your employer as well. Also, try and find out if your company officially adheres to a code known as Corporate Social Responsibility. If they do, they should live up to at least ILO standards. If they don't adhere to such a code yet, they should. Many companies do by now. You may bring this up.

If your score is between 39 - 49

You're pretty much out of the danger zone. Your employer adheres to most of the existing labour laws and regulations. But there is always room for improvement. So next time you talk to management about your work conditions, prepare well and consult this DecentWorkCheck as a checklist.

01/13 Work & Wages

Regulations on work and wages:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Minimum Wage

Minimum wage is all the salary that is given to the worker for his work by virtue of a written or oral employment contract regardless of the kind of wage or its method of payment, in addition to periodic increments.

Wages are fixed in individual agreements between the worker and the employer. Though, it is government's responsibility to fix the minimum wage rate and the legislation provides for the establishment of a minimum wage system by the government. Council of Ministers, upon a proposal by the Minister, sets a minimum wage whenever necessary.

If the employment contract or the work organization regulation do not provide for the wage binding on the employer, the wage estimated for the same type of work in the firm, if any, is adopted; otherwise, the wage is estimated in accordance with the profession's norms at the place where the work is performed. In the absence of such norms, the Commission for Settlement of Labor Disputes estimates the wage in accordance with the dictates of justice.

The following are exempted from the implementation of the provisions of this Law; the employer's family members, namely, the spouse, the ascendants and descendants who constitute the only workers of the firm (family run enterprises); domestic helpers and the like; sea workers working on board of vessels with a load of less than five hundred tons; certain agricultural workers; non-Saudi workers entering the Kingdom to perform a specific task for a period not exceeding two months; and the players and coaches of sports clubs and federations.

Regular Pay

Actual wage is the basic wage plus all other due increments decided for the worker for the effort he exerts at work or for risks he encounters in performing his work, or those decided for the worker for the work under the work contract or work organization regulations. Wage includes:

- The commission or percentage from sales or profits paid against what the worker markets, produces, collects or realizes from increased or enhanced production;
- Allowances the worker is entitled to for exerted effort, or risks he encounters while performing his job;
- Increments that may be granted in accordance with the standard of living or to meet family expenses;

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

- Grant or reward: What the employer grants to the worker and what is paid to him for honesty or efficiency and the like, if such grant or reward is stipulated in the work contract or the work organization regulation of the firm or if customarily granted to the extent that the workers consider it part of the wage rather than a donation;
- Other privileges include: what the employer commits himself to provide to the worker for his work by stating it in the work contract or the work organization regulation and it's estimated at a maximum of two months basic wage per annum, unless it is otherwise determined to exceed that in the work contract or the work organization regulation.

The worker's wages and all other entitlements are paid in the Country's official currency (Saudi Riyal) at the workplace during working hours. Wages may be paid through accredited banks in the Kingdom, with the consent of the worker, provided that their due dates do not exceed the specified dates.

Workers are entitled to their pay on a regular and timely basis. Wages are paid monthly to the workers employed on monthly basis; weekly to the workers employed on daily basis; and weekly commensurate with the completed portion of the work to the piece rate workers (If the work is done by the piece and requires a period of more than two weeks for completion of work). In other cases, the worker's wages shall be paid at least once a week. Wages are paid during working hours and at the workplace. There is also provisions for direct transfer to the employee bank account.

Employers are not allowed to deduct worker's salary, without his/her consent, for reasons other than those specified by the law. In the following cases, no such written consent is required:

- a) Payment of loans extended by the employer;
- b) Social security contribution or other provident fund contributions;
- c) Fines for labour law violations

However, in all cases, deductions made may not exceed half the employee's due wage (50%), unless the Commission for the Settlement of Labor Disputes determines that further deductions can be made or that the employee is in need of more than half his wage. In the latter case, the employee may not be given more than three quarters (75%) of his wage.

In case of deduction or delay (without valid justification), the worker, his representative or the head of the competent Labour Office may submit a request to the Commission for the Settlement of Labour Disputes to order the employer to return to the worker any wrongfully-deducted amounts or to pay the outstanding wages. The said Commission may, if it establishes that the employer has unjustifiably deducted the said amounts or delayed the payment of the wages, impose on the employer a fine not exceeding twice the amount deducted from the worker's wage or twice the outstanding wages. Saudi Arabia is currently implementing a wage protection system where companies are required to deposit worker salaries in bank accounts.

02/13 Compensation

Regulations on compensation:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Overtime Compensation

Normal working hours are eight (08) hours a day and forty-eight (48) hours a week for all the employees. During the month of Ramadan, the normal working hours for Muslims are reduced to a maximum of six (06) hours a day or thirty-six (36) hours a week. The number of working hours can be raised to nine hours a day for certain categories of workers or in certain industries and jobs where the worker does not work continuously. It may likewise be reduced to seven hours a day for certain categories of workers or in certain hazardous or harmful industries or jobs. Categories of workers, industries and jobs referred to is determined pursuant to a decision by the Minister.

Working hours and rest periods throughout the day shall be organized so that the employee does not work for more than five hours continually without periods designated for rest, prayers and meals of at least 30 minutes per period. The working hours and rest period shall be organized in such a way that the employee shall not remain at the place of work for more than twelve hours per day.

In accordance with the labour law, if an employee works beyond the stipulated working hours, i.e., 48 hours a week, he/she is entitled to an overtime pay that is one and a half times the regular rate of his ordinary pay (150% of the regular wage rate). An employee cannot be required to work overtime. If the establishment is operated on the basis of weekly working hours, the hours in excess of the hours taken as the criterion (usually 48 hours a week) are considered overtime hours. All working hours performed during holidays and "Eids" are deemed overtime hours.

In accordance with Ministry of Labour's guidance, the overtime hours that a worker can be asked in a year are 720 hours (60 hours per month) however worker can agree to do more overtime hours through a written agreement.

03/13 Annual Leave & Holidays

Regulations on annual leave and holidays:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Paid Vacation / Annual Leave

The Labour Law provides for annual leave on completion of a year of continuous service with an employer. A worker is entitled to 21 working days of paid annual leave for one year of service. Annual leave also increases with the length of service. A worker is entitled to at least 30 working days of annual leave after 05 years of service with the same employer. Their payment for annual leave is made in advance which includes transportation allowance. Weekends and public holidays are not considered part of the annual leave. An employer has to pay a fine of SR100,000 for including weekends as part of annual leave.

A worker may enjoy his leave in the year it is due. The employer determines the dates of annual leave according to the work exigencies and conditions or may grant them in rotation to ensure smooth functioning of the enterprise. Employer has to notify the worker of the proposed date of his leave in sufficient time of at least thirty days in advance. Worker must not forgo his/her annual leave or receive cash in lieu of annual leave during his period of service.

A worker may, with the employer's approval, postpone his annual leave or part thereof to the following year. An employer may also postpone the worker's leave after the end of the year it is due if required by work conditions, provided that this delay is not more than ninety days. If work conditions require extension of the postponement, the worker's consent must be obtained in writing. Such postponement must not, however, exceed the end of the year following the year the leave is due (A worker must be granted annual leave within two years of it becoming due).

A worker is entitled to a wage for the accrued days of the leave if employment contract is terminated before worker could use such leave. This applies to the period of work for which the leave has not yet become due. He is also entitled to a leave pay on a proportionate basis taking into account the months of work.

Pay on Public Holidays

Workers are entitled to paid public holidays. Public holidays in Saudi Arabia are usually 10-15 in number.

According to the constitution, national holidays include: Eid Al-Fitr (a religious feast celebrated on the 1st of Shawal and on completion of the month of Ramadan the 10th month of the Islamic calendar) and Eid Al-Adha (a religious feast celebrated on the 10th of Dhul-Hijjah, the 12th month of the Islamic calendar). These are determined according to Hijra (Lunar) calendar.

A worker is entitled to a paid leave of not less than ten days and not more than fifteen days, including Eid Al-Adha holiday, to perform Hajj only once during his service if he has not performed it before. In order to be eligible for this leave, the worker must have spent at least two consecutive years with the employer. The employer may determine the number of workers who are given this leave annually in accordance with work requirements. Workers are entitled to 4 days leave each for Eid Al-Fitr and Eid Al-Adha.

Each worker is entitled to full-pay leave on Eids and occasions specified in the Regulations.

Weekly Rest Days

Workers are entitled to 24 consecutive hours of rest per week after at most 6 continuous working days. The weekly rest period is reckoned as a paid time.

Generally, Friday is considered as weekly rest day for all the workers. However, the employer may replace this day for some of his workers by any other day of the week after proper notification to the competent labor office. The employer must allow the workers to perform their religious obligations. The weekly rest day may not be compensated by cash.

04/13 Employment Security

Regulations on employment security:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Written Employment Particulars

An employment contract is a contract concluded between an employer and an employee, whereby the latter undertakes to work under the management or supervision of the former for a wage.

There is no provision in the labour law that requires an employer to provide a written statement of particulars to a newly hired employee. Generally, the employment contracts of employees are not provided in writing (with the exception of foreign nationals and some other employees), but either the employer or the employee may demand it at any time.

An employment contract, written in Arabic, is drawn up in two copies (signed by all the parties), one copy each for the worker and the employer. However, a contract is deemed to exist even if not in written form. In this case, the employee alone may establish the contract and his entitlements arising there from by all methods of proof. For employees of the government and public corporations, the appointment decision or order issued by the competent authority serves as the contract.

The Ministry of Labor issues a unified form for the work contract, which primarily include the name of the employer, venue, the name of the employee, nationality, identification, wage agreed upon including any benefits, date of employment and duration of the contract (fixed term or indefinite contract). The prescribed contract by the Ministry has some compulsory and other optional clauses depending on the term of contract. The eight main clauses of this employment contract are contract purpose, term of the contract and probationary period; working week and daily and weekly working hours; duties of the employer and worker; contract termination; end of service benefit (gratuity); application of labour or enterprise regulations in conjunction with the contract; and contact details of both parties. Parties to the work contract may add any other articles as long as such article do not contradict with the provisions of the Labor Law, its Executive Regulation and any other decisions issued in this regard.

The work contract for non-Saudis is always written and of a definite term. If the contract does not specify the term, the term of the work permit is deemed as the duration of the contract.

Fixed Term Contracts

Saudi labour Law allows hiring fixed term contract workers for tasks of permanent nature.

If a Saudi national is engaged in three consecutive fixed term contracts or if the continuous employment of the Saudi national reaches four years (whichever is less) and both parties continue to perform the contract, then the contract is automatically converted to an indefinite contract. Previously the maximum term was three years or two consecutive renewals of the fixed term contract (whichever is less).

This provides more certainty for employers in engaging Saudi nationals, given that a fixed term contract automatically terminates on its expiry (unless both parties continue to perform the contract) whereas an unlimited term contract can only be terminated for a valid reason to avoid a finding of arbitrary dismissal

Source: §55-57 of the Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Probation Period

An employee can be subject to a probationary period of no more than 90 calendar days and during this period the contract can be terminated without notice. Subject to the employee's consent, this period can be extended up to 180 calendar days (i.e., six months in total). This allows employers more flexibility in establishing whether the employee is suitable for the role. An employee can now also be placed under a second probation period with the same employer if more than six months have passed since the employee was previously terminated by the employer or if the earlier probation was for a separate job.

If the employee was under a probation period, then such probation period must be clearly referenced and specified in the work contract. The probation period may not exceed ninety days; such period may be extended, subject to a written agreement between the parties, to a total of a hundred and eighty days. The Eid holidays as well as sick leave are not included in the calculation of the probation period. Either party may terminate the work contract during the probation period, unless the contract includes a provision giving such right exclusively to either party.

If the work contract is terminated during the probation period, neither party is entitled to compensation nor is the employee entitled to severance pay.

DECENTWORKCHECK.ORG

Notice Requirement

The labour law requires written termination notice before terminating services of a worker.

A work contract can be terminated in the following cases: if both parties agree to terminate it, provided that the worker's consent is given in writing; if the term specified in the contract expires, unless the contract has been explicitly renewed in accordance with the provisions of Labour Law in which case it shall remain in force until the expiry of its term; at the discretion of either party in indefinite term contracts; the worker attains the age of retirement, unless the two parties agree upon continuing work after this age; and force majeure.

Employment contract can only be validly terminated where the employer is (i) closing down the establishment completely; or (ii) terminating the business activity where the employee is employed.

An employer can also terminate an employee for unlawful absence of 30 days a year or 15 consecutive days (previously 20 and 10 days respectively). The requirement to have given a previous written warning is needed now after an employee's absences of ten non-consecutive days or five consecutive days.

The notice period for monthly paid employees on indefinite term contracts has doubled from 30 days to 60 days and is set as at least 30 days for others. The notice period is the same for both parties wishing to terminate the employment contract. If employer wants to terminate an indefinite term contract without serving written notice, he has to pay remuneration equivalent to the notice period (30 to 60 days). In the case of a fixed term contract, the parties wishing to terminate the contract has to pay salaries for the remaining period of fixed term contract. Such compensation, however, cannot be less than two monthly salaries.

Compensation is also provided in case of invalid termination. The parties can expressly set out in the contract of employment what compensation is payable if either party terminates the contract for an unlawful reason. If no compensation is agreed in the contract then the compensation payable will be as follows:

- 15 days' per year of service in case of unlimited term contracts
- The wages for the residual period of the contract in the case of fixed term contracts.

The default compensation must not be less than two months' wages and it is therefore highly recommended for employers in the Kingdom to expressly include in the contract the compensation for early termination to avoid the uncertainty of uncapped compensation or buying out the residual period of the contract. The Saudi Labour Law does not provide for the right to reinstatement in the event of wrongful dismissal.

Employees now have a right to paid time off work to look for alternative employment where notice was served by the employer. This is limited to one full day or eight hours per week and applies throughout the notice period.

Severance Pay

Under Saudi labour law, an end of service benefit (ESB) award is provided regardless of the reason of termination of employment (retirement, end of the fixed-term contract, "force majeure", resignation). The award is half-month wages for each of the first five years of service and one-month wages for the following years. It is calculated on the basis of the last wage and the worker is entitled to an end-of-service award for the portions of the year in proportion to the time spent on the job. It is however reduced in case of resignation.

The above benefit work as a benchmark for awarding end of service benefits in the case of resignation. If an employee resigned, the following conditions are applicable:

- a) No end of service award if the length of employment is less than two years;
- b) One third (33.33%) of the end of service award if length of service is between two to five years (less than 5 years). The ESB award, as mentioned above, for less than five years' service is 50% of the salary. Thus, one-third of the ESB award is $\frac{1}{3} \times 50 = 16.67\%$;
- c) Two-third (66.67%) of the ESB award if the length of service is between five years and (less than) ten years. Thus the ESB award during the first five years is $\frac{2}{3} \times 50 = 33.33\%$ and during the second five years is $\frac{2}{3} \times 100 = 66.67\%$;
- d) Full (100%) of the ESB award if the length of service is 10 years or more. Thus the ESB award during first five years is 50% of one-month salary for each year of service and 100% of one-month salary for each year of service during the next five years

There are certain exceptions to above conditions and resignation in these cases is treated as termination by employer for calculation of ESB award: if a female worker resigns within 6 months of the date of her marriage or within 3 months of the date of giving birth or if a worker leaves job due to natural inability to work (death or permanent physical/mental disability).

On termination, employers are currently required (on request) to provide a service certificate (free of charge) which sets out details of the employee's employment (date of joining and leaving, salary details and profession). Employers are prohibited from including anything in this certificate that may be harmful to the employee's reputation or may reduce his further employment opportunities. Previously, this could be included in the certificate if the employer included reasons for termination of employment contract.

No Harmful Work

Labour Law does not provide any specific provisions for working conditions of pregnant working woman. However, there is a general provision in labour law which prohibits the employer to employ women in hazardous jobs or industries.

Women can work in any field suitable to their nature. The Minister of the relevant industry determines the professions and jobs that are deemed detrimental to health and are likely to expose women to specific risks. In which cases, women's employment is prohibited or restricted under certain terms.

Maternity Leave

Female employees are entitled to 10 weeks (70 days) of maternity leave. Out of these 10 weeks maternity leave, 04 weeks are provided prior to the expected date of delivery (antenatal) and 06 weeks after delivery (post-natal) but it is not obligatory. A female employee can start her maternity leave when she wants provided this is no earlier than four weeks before the expected delivery date. The probable date of delivery is determined by the physician or pursuant to a medical report certified by a health authority.

A female employee has an entitlement to extend her maternity leave for one month without pay (i.e. maternity leave is now ten weeks' paid with an option of an additional four weeks unpaid leave). Additionally, if a female employee gives birth to an ill or disabled baby whose health condition required a permanent attendant, she is entitled to an additional paid one month of maternity leave starting from the end of the maternity leave, and has the right to extend such leave for another month without pay.

Income

The maternity leave is fully paid by the employer. The payment during maternity leave depends on a worker's length of service. The maternity leave is unpaid if the length of service with the employer is less than one year, half paid if the length of service is between one to three years; and the leave is fully paid if length of service is three years or more. If a worker receives full payment for maternity leave during a year, she is not entitled to receive payment for annual leave during the same year. However, if she has availed maternity leave on half pay, she can receive half wages during annual leave.

A woman worker, on maternity leave, is not allowed to work for another employer during maternity leave. If it is established that the worker is working for another employer, the original employer has the right to recover all the amount paid to her for maternity leave.

Protection from Dismissals

Labour law prohibits the employer from terminating the service of a female worker during her maternity leave or to discontinue her joining the work due to a sickness which is evident by a medical report that it is because of pregnancy or delivery.

The employment of such female worker may not be terminated during the 180 days preceding the expected date of delivery in the absence of one of the legitimate causes provided for in this Law. An employer cannot terminate the services of a working woman during the period of maternity leave. Similarly, an employer cannot terminate a woman worker during illness related to pregnancy however such absence should not exceed 6 months/180 days.

Breastfeeding

Labour law requires employers to provide nursing breaks of one hour per day for new mothers. These breaks are provided in addition to rest break granted to all workers. These nursing breaks are fully paid. This period or periods are calculated as part of the actual working hours and do not result in any deduction in wages.

In establishments with 50 or more female workers, employers are required to provide a suitable place with adequate number of babysitters to look after the children under the age of six years, if the number of children reaches ten and more.

The Minister may require the employer who employs a 100 or more women in a single city to set up a nursery, either on his own or in conjunction with other employers in the same city, or alternatively to contract with an existing nursery to care for the children of the female workers who are under six years of age during the work periods. In such case, the Minister sets forth the terms and conditions regulating such facility as well as the charges imposed on the female workers benefiting from service.

07/13 Health & Safety

Regulations on health and safety:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Employer Cares

Labour Law makes it obligatory on the employer to provide safe and healthy working environment to his employees.

An employer must take the necessary precautions to protect the workers against hazards, occupational diseases, the machinery in use, and ensure work safety and protection. He should post in a prominent place in the workplace the instructions related to work and workers safety in Arabic and, when necessary, in any other language that the workers understand. The employer may not charge the workers or deduct from their wages any amounts for the provision of such protection.

It is obligatory for an employer to maintain the workplace in a clean and hygienic condition; provide lighting, supply water for drinking and washing purposes; and other safety and health protection measures.

The employer must take the necessary precautions to protect the workers against hazards, occupational diseases and ensure the safety of the equipment and machinery. He must provide the technical means to combat fire, including safety exits at the workplace at all times.

An employer must also make available one or more medical aid cabinets, supplied with drugs and other necessities required in a first aid kit. An employer shall assign one or more physicians to provide, at least once a year, full checkups on all employees for any potential occupational disease, and record the results in the employer's record as well as employee record files.

An employer is responsible for emergencies and accidents which may affect persons, other than his workers, who enter the workplaces to perform their official duties or with the approval of the employer or his agents, if such emergencies and accidents are due to negligence in taking the technical precautions required by the nature of his work, and he has to compensate them for damage and harm they may sustain in accordance with the general laws.

Employer can terminate the contract of a worker who deliberately fails to observe the instructions related to the safety of work and workers as may be posted in a prominent place. Worker may also leave his job without notice if a serious hazard threatening the safety or health of the worker exists in the workplace, provided that the employer is aware thereof but fails to take measures indicating its removal.

Free Protection

An employer is required to provide free personal protective equipment to protect employees from workplace hazards. It is the employer's responsibility to supply the workers with the appropriate personal gear and train them on its use.

A worker must use and preserve the personal protective equipment designated for each process and carry out the instructions established to protect his health against injuries and diseases. The worker should refrain from any action or omission that may lead to failure to implement the instructions, misuse or impair the devices provided to protect the workplace as well as the health and safety of fellow workers.

Labour Inspection System

Labour Law provides for an independent labour inspection system in the country. The Ministry of Labour is responsible, through its labour inspectors, for monitoring and enforcing the application of employment legislation, including health and safety provisions.

Work inspectors have the right to access any firm at any time, day or night, without prior notice; perform any examination or investigation required to ascertain proper implementation of the Law; interview the employer, his representative or the workers in private or in the presence of witnesses about any matter relating to the implementation of the provisions of the Law; review all books, records and other documents and obtain any copies or extracts therefrom; and take sample(s) of the materials used or handled in the industrial and other operations subject to inspection and believed to have a harmful effect on the health or safety of workers, for the purpose of analyzing such samples in government laboratories to determine the extent of such effect, and duly notify the employer or his representative of the same.

Employers and their agents must facilitate the inspectors and officials entrusted with inspection and in the performance of their duties. They should provide them with required data related to the nature of their work, respond to requests to appear before them and dispatch a representative when asked. Whenever the need arises, physicians, engineers, chemists, and specialists in occupational health and safety may participate in the inspection.

Inspection powers are granted to Ministry of Labour Officials and inspections may now also be carried out by consultants (i.e. not direct employees) to the Ministry. Inspectors are also now obliged to produce reports and minutes of any inspection and to impose an immediate fine for any discovered violations (rather than offer initial guidance and corrective recommendations).

Potential fines have also increased to SAR 100,000, and there is greater scope for shutting down an establishment for 30 days or permanently depending on the severity of the violation. An employer may come to an agreement with the Ministry regarding payment of a fine and corrective action within a specific time frame, failing which the continued violation will incur further fines. An establishment may only be closed down completely after a court action is successfully raised by the Ministry against the employer.

A whistle-blower who assists Ministry of Labour inspectors to detect a violation of the Labour Law can receive up to 25% of the value of the fine imposed on the employer.

Disability / Work Injury Benefit

Work injuries are divided into four categories: (i) permanent total incapacity (ii) permanent partial incapacity (iii) temporary incapacity and (iv) fatal injury leading to death of a worker.

In case of temporary disability, the employee is entitled to 100% of the monthly wage for a period of sixty days and 75% of his monthly wage for the remaining period required for.

If the treatment period exceeds one year, or if the physician's report states that the employee is unlikely to recover, and his medical condition prevents him from work, the employee's condition is considered as permanent disability and the employment contract is terminated. The employee receives compensation for the accident or injury and the employer does not have the right for refund of what he paid during that year.

If the accident or injury results in a full permanent disability, or results in the death of the employee, the employee or his beneficiaries are entitled to a compensation equal to the full monthly wage for three years, and the amount may not be less than 54,000 Saudi Riyals.

If the accident or injury results in a partial permanent disability, the employee is entitled to compensation proportionate to the disability, according to the disability percentage schedule, multiplied by the compensation amount for a full permanent disability.

These benefits are not provided if the employee deliberately injured himself; the accident or injury occurred as a result of a ruthless intended act performed by the employee; and the employee refused to be reviewed by a doctor or physician, or refused the treatment required by the doctor or physician assigned by the employer for no specific reason.

09/13 Social Security

Regulations on social security:

Labour Law 2005, last amended in 2015

Pension Rights

Law provide for both full and reduced/early pension. For full pension, a worker must have reached 60 years of age (women: 55 years) with at least 120 months of paid or credited contributions. Pensionable age is reduced to 55 years for arduous and hazardous work.

Amount of old-age benefit is 2.5% of the insured worker's average monthly earnings during the last two years for each year of contributions, up to 100%. The average monthly earning used to calculate benefits must not exceed 150% of the insured worker's monthly earnings at the beginning of the last five-year contribution period.

In case the insured person's monthly earnings decrease during the last two years before retirement, special provisions apply to adjust the average monthly earnings used to calculate benefits.

Cost of living allowance is paid to persons who receive the old-age pension. The first 25,000 riyals of the old-age pension is increased by 5% a year for three consecutive years.

If the insured person does not qualify for an old-age pension, old-age settlement is paid. A lump sum of 10% of the insured worker's average monthly earnings during the last two years before retirement are paid for each month of the first five years of contributions plus 12% for each additional month.

Dependents' / Survivors' Benefit

Dependents' benefit is provided to the survivors if the deceased was in covered employment at the time of death and had at least three consecutive months of contributions or six nonconsecutive months of contributions (12 consecutive months or 18 nonconsecutive months for voluntarily insured persons who first joined the scheme when aged 50 or older); or was a pensioner.

If the deceased was no longer in covered employment at the time of death and was not a pensioner, the pension is paid with at least 120 months of paid or credited contributions (credited contributions must not exceed 60 months).

Eligible survivors include the widow(er); a son younger than age 21 (age 26 if a full-time student, no limit for disabled); an unmarried daughter; dependent brothers, sisters, parents, grandparents, and grandchildren in certain circumstances; and an ex-wife (according to the Islamic law). The pension for a female survivor ceases upon remarriage but may be reinstated if she is subsequently divorced or widowed.

If there are three or more survivors, the pension is 100% of the pension a deceased worker received or would have been entitled to receive. This pension is 75% of total pension for two dependents and only 50% for one surviving dependent. The pension is equally split among all eligible survivors.

If the deceased did not qualify for a pension, Survivor settlement is paid to eligible survivors. It is equal to a lump sum of 10% of the insured's average monthly earnings during the last two years before death and is paid for each month of the first five years of contributions plus 12% for each additional month.

Marriage grant is paid upon marriage to a widow or an eligible daughter, sister, or granddaughter. This is 18 times the survivor's monthly pension.

Death grant is also paid to eligible survivors. A lump sum of three months of the survivor pension is split equally among eligible survivors.

Unemployment Benefits

Since November 2011, Saudi government has started paying unemployment benefit. In order to avail unemployment benefit, the worker must be younger than 60 years and have at least 12 months of contributions in the 36 months before the first claim; at least 18 months in the 36 months preceding the second claim; at least 24 months in the 36 months before the third claim; and at least 36 months in the 48 months before the fourth and subsequent claims.

The insured worker must be registered with a human resources development fund in the Ministry of Labor; be capable of and available for work; and have no other sources of income. Unemployment must not be due to voluntary leaving, misconduct, or the refusal to a suitable job offer.

Unemployment benefit provided to the worker is 60% of the insured worker's average monthly contributory wage during the first three months of unemployment and 50% thereafter. The benefit is paid for up to 12 months.

The minimum monthly benefit is 2,000 riyals or 100% of the insured's average monthly contributory wage, whichever is less. The maximum monthly benefit is 9,000 riyals for the first three months and 7,500 riyals thereafter.

Invalidity Benefits

There is provision for invalidity benefits under Saudi law. The insured person must have been employed in covered employment and the invalidity must have started before the age of 60 years with at least 12 consecutive months of contributions or 18 nonconsecutive months of contributions (twice this amount for voluntarily insured persons who joined the scheme at age 50 or older).

If a disability begins during covered employment, the pension is 2.5% of the insured worker's average monthly earnings during the last 2 years for each year of contributions, up to 100% or 50% of the insured worker's average monthly earnings during the last two years before the disability began (or over the total contribution period if it is less than two years), whichever is greater.

The average monthly earnings used to calculate benefits must not exceed 150% of the insured's monthly earnings at the beginning of the last five-year contribution period. If the insured worker's monthly earnings decrease during the last two years before the disability began, special provisions apply to adjust the average monthly earnings used to calculate benefits.

If the insured person is no longer in covered employment when the disability began, he/she must meet the contribution requirements for the old-age pension. In such case, old-age pension is paid.

Constant-attendance supplement (50% of the disability pension) is paid if the insured worker requires the constant attendance of others to perform daily functions. The medical board under General Organization for Social Insurance assesses the need for constant attendance.

If the insured person does not qualify for a disability pension, disability settlement is paid. It is a lump sum of 10% of the insured worker's average monthly earnings during the last two years before the disability began for each month of the first five years of contributions plus 12% for each additional month.

Minimum Age for Employment

The minimum age for employment is 15 years. Minor under the age of fifteen years may not be employed or allowed to enter the workplace. The Minister may raise this age limit in certain industries or areas or for certain categories of minors. The Minister may allow the employment or work of persons between 13 and 15 years of age in light works, subject to the following conditions: those jobs are potentially not harmful to their health or growth; do not hinder their school attendance, participation in orientation or vocational training programs, or impair their ability to benefit from their schooling.

Employer is obliged to obtain following documents prior to employing a minor:

- The national identification card or an official birth certificate;
- A report of physical fitness for the required job issued by a competent physician and duly certified by a health authority; and
- The consent of the minor's guardian

The above documents are kept in the minor's personal file.

An employer must notify the competent labor office of the employment of each minor within the first week of such employment, and keep a register at the workplace for employed minors, showing the name of the minor, his/her age, full name of his guardian, his place of residence and date of his employment.

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work

Minimum age for hazardous occupations is 18 years. Minors, under 18 years, may not be employed in hazardous jobs or harmful industries or in occupations or jobs that may endanger their health, safety or morals due to the nature or conditions of the same. A Minister's decision must specify such jobs, industries and occupations. Employment of young workers (15-18 years) is prohibited in the following sectors:

- a) Work in mines, quarries, or the extraction of metallic materials from the ground;
- b) Industries posing health hazards;
- c) Strenuous activities; or
- d) Activities which involve bodily risks, such as those involving sharp cutting equipment.

Working hours for minors may not exceed six hours a day for all months except for the month of Ramadhan when the actual working hours may not exceed four hours per day. The minor may not stay at the workplace for more than seven hours. Working hours should be organized so that a minor may not work for more than four consecutive hours without one or more periods, each not less than half an hour, for rest, food and prayers. Minor worker's total stay at workplace including breaks should not exceed 7 hours.

Minors are not allowed to work at night time, during the weekly rest days, Eids, official holidays or annual vacations.

Overtime Compensation

Working overtime is to be avoided. Whenever it is unavoidable, extra compensation is at stake - minimally the basic hourly wage plus all additional benefits you are entitled to. In accordance with ILO Convention 1, overtime pay rate should not be less than one and a quarter times (125%) the regular rate.

Night Work Compensation

Night work means all work which is performed during a period of not less than seven (07) consecutive hours, including the interval from midnight to 5 a.m. A night worker is a worker whose work requires performance of a substantial number of hours of night work which exceeds a specified limit (at least 3 hours). Convention 171 requires that night workers be compensated with reduced working time or higher pay or similar benefits. Similar provisions are found in the Night Work Recommendation No. 178 of 1990.

Compensatory Holidays/Rest Days

If you have to work on a national/religious holiday or a weekly rest day, you should be entitled to compensation. Not necessarily in the same week, provided that the right to a paid compensation is not.

Weekend/Public Holiday work Compensation

If you have to work during the weekend, you should thereby acquire the right to a rest period of 24 uninterrupted hours instead. Not necessarily in the weekend, but at least in the course of the following week. Similarly, if you have to work on a public holiday, you must be given a compensatory holiday. A higher rate of pay for working on a public holiday or a weekly rest day does not take your right to a holiday/ rest.

Paid Vacation/Annual Leave

An employee is entitled to at least 21 consecutive paid annual leave. National and religious holidays are not included. Collective agreements must provide at least one day of annual leave on full remuneration for every 17 days on which the employee worked or was entitled to be paid.

Pay on Public Holidays

You should be entitled to paid leave during national and officially recognized public holidays.

Weekly Rest Day

Workers should enjoy a rest period of at least twenty-four consecutive hours in every 7-day period, i.e., a week

04/13 Employment SecurityILO Conventions on employment termination

Convention 158 (1982) on employment termination

Saudi Arab has not ratified the Convention 158.

The questions under this section measure the security or even flexibility or precariousness of an employment relationship. Although these are not clearly mentioned in a single convention (severance pay and notice requirement are provided in the Termination of Employment Convention No. 158) however, the best practices in the field require that employees be provided with a written contract of employment; workers on fixed term contracts should not be hired for tasks of permanent nature; a reasonable probation period (ideally lower than or equal to 6 months) may be followed to assess the suitability of an employee; a period of notice must be specified in an employment contract before severing the employment relationship; and workers be paid severance allowance on termination of employment relationship.

Written Employment Particulars

A contract of employment may be oral or written however workers should be provided with a written statement of employment at the start of their employment.

Fixed Term Contracts

Fixed Term Contract workers must not be hired for permanent tasks as it leads to precarious employment.

Probation Period

A reasonable probation period must be provided to a worker to learn new skills. A newly hired employee may be fired during probation period without any negative consequences.

Notice Requirement

A reasonable notice period, depending on the length of service of an employee, may be required before an employer may sever the employment relationship.

Severance Pay

Employers may be required to pay a severance allowance on termination of employment (due to redundancy or any other reason except for lack of capacity or misconduct).

07/13 Health & SafetyILO Conventions on Health and Safety

Most ILO OSH Conventions deal with very specific Occupational Safety hazards, such as asbestos and chemicals.

Convention 155 (1981) is the relevant general convention here. Labour Inspection Convention: 81 (1947)

Saudi Arab has ratified the Convention 81 only.

Employer cares

Your employer, in all fairness, should make sure that the work process is safe.

Free protection

Your employer should provide protective clothing and other necessary safety precautions for free.

Training

In order to ensure workplace safety and health, a central, independent and efficient labour inspection system should be present.

Labour Inspection System

You and your colleagues should receive training in all work related safety and health aspects and you should have been shown the emergency exits.

08/13 Sick Leave & Employment Injury BenefitsILO Conventions on Sickness and Employment Injury

Convention 102 (1952), Conventions 121 (1964) and 130 (1969) concerning Social Security, Employment Injury Benefits and Medical Care and Sickness Benefits

Saudi Arab has not ratified the Conventions 102, 121 & 130.

Income/Paid Sick Leave

Your rights to work and income should be protected when illness strikes. The national labour law may provide that sickness benefit may not be paid during the first 3 days of your absence. Minimally you should be entitled to an income during first 6 months of illness. This income should be at least 45 per cent of the minimum wage. (Countries are free to opt for a system which guarantees 60 per cent of the last wages during the first 6 months of illness or even during the first year). You should be entitled to paid sick leave.

Medical Care

During illness, you should be entitled to medical care without any additional cost. Employees and their family members should have access to the necessary minimal medical care at an affordable cost.

Job security

During the first 6 months of your illness, you should not be fired.

Disability/Work Injury Benefit

Whenever you are disabled due to an occupational disease or accident, you ought to receive a higher benefit. In the case of temporary or total incapacity/disability, a worker may at least be provided 50% of his average wage while in the case of fatal injury, the survivors may be provided with 40% of the deceased worker's average wage in periodical payments.

09/13 Social SecurityILO Conventions on Social Security

Social Security (minimum standards): Convention 102 (1952). For several benefits somewhat higher standards have been set in subsequent Conventions

Employment Injury Benefits: Conventions 121 (1964),

Invalidity, Old age and survivors' benefits: Convention 128(1967)

Medical Care and Sickness Benefits: Convention 130 (1969)

Unemployment Benefits: Convention 168 (1988).

Saudi Arab has not ratified any of the above-mentioned Conventions.

Pension Rights

In the normal circumstances, the pensionable age may not be set higher than 65 years of age. If retirement age is fixed above 65 years, it should give "due regard to the working ability of elderly persons" and "demographic, economic and social criteria, which shall be demonstrated statistically". Pension can be set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Dependent's/Survivors' Benefit

When the breadwinner has died, the spouse and children are entitled to a benefit, expressed as a percentage of the minimum wage, or a percentage of the earned wage. This must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

Unemployment Benefit

For a limited period of time, the unemployed has a right to unemployment benefit set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Invalidity Benefits

Invalidity benefit is provided when a protected person is unable to engage in a gainful employment, before standard retirement age, due to a non-occupational chronic condition resulting in disease, injury or disability. Invalidity Benefit must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

10/13 Fair TreatmentILO Conventions on Fair Treatment

Convention 111 (1958) lists the discrimination grounds which are forbidden.

Convention 100 (1952) is about Equal Remuneration for Work of Equal Value.

Saudi Arab has ratified both Conventions 100 & 111.

Equal Pay

At workplaces equal pay for men and women for work of equal value is a must, regardless of marital status. Pay inequality based on race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction/place of birth or social origin is also forbidden. A transparent remuneration system and the clear matching of pay and position should be in place and to help prevent wage discrimination.

Sexual Harassment

Not clearly provided in ILO Conventions. However, sexual intimidation/harassment is gender discrimination.

Non-Discrimination

Your employer can't discriminate against you on in any aspect of employment (appointment, promotion, training and transfer) on the basis of union membership or participation in union activities, filing of a complaint against an employer, race, colour, sex, marital status, family responsibilities, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, temporary absence due to illness, age, trade union membership, disability/HIV-AIDS, or absence from work during maternity leave. (Conventions 111, 156, 158, 159 and 183)

Equal Choice of Profession

People have the right to work and there can't be occupational segregation on the basis of gender.

11/13 Minors & YouthILO Conventions on Minors & Youth

Minimum Age: Convention 138 (1973)

Worst Forms of Child labour: Convention 182 (1999)

Saudi Arab has ratified both Conventions 138 & 182.

Minimum Age for Employment

At workplaces, children may not be forced to perform work that could harm their health and hampers their physical and mental development.

All children should be able to attend school. Once this is safeguarded, there is no objection against children performing light jobs between the ages of 12 and 14. The general minimum age is 15 years however developing countries may set this at 14 years. The minimum age for hazardous work, work that is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, is 18 years. It can also be set at a lower level of 16 years under certain circumstances

Children should not be employed in a work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children. It is considered one of the worst forms of child labour. The minimum age for such hazardous work is 18 years.

12/13 Forced LabourILO Conventions on Forced/Bonded labour

Forced labour: Conventions 29 (1930)

Abolition of Forced labour: Conventions 105 (1957)

Forced labour is the work one has to perform under threat of punishment: forfeit of wages, dismissal, harassment or violence, even corporal punishment. Forced labour means violation of human rights.

Saudi Arab has ratified both Conventions 29 & 105.

Prohibition on Forced and Compulsory labour

Except for certain exceptions, forced or compulsory labour (exacted under the threat of punishment and for which you may not have offered voluntarily) is prohibited.

Freedom to change jobs and Right to quit

Employers have to allow you to look for work elsewhere. If you do, you should not be shortened on wages or threatened with dismissal. (In the reverse cases, international law considers this as forced labour).

Inhumane Working Conditions

If the total working hours, inclusive of overtime exceed 56 hours per week, the worker is considered to be working under inhumane working conditions.

ILO Conventions on Trade Union Rights

Freedom of association and protection of the right to organize: Convention 87 (1948)

Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining: Convention 98 (1949)

Saudi Arab has not ratified the Conventions 87 & 98.

Freedom to join and form a union

Freedom of association means freedom to join a trade union. This is part of the fundamental human rights. Employees may not be put at a disadvantage when they are active in the trade union outside working hours. The list of exclusions for sectors of economic activity and workers in an organization should be short.

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

Trade unions are entitled to negotiate with employers on term of employment without hindrance. The freedom of a trade union to negotiate with employers to try and conclude collective agreements is protected. (The ILO has a special procedure for handling complaints from unions about violation of this principle).

Right to Strike

Workers have the right to strike in order to defend their social and economic interests. It is incidental and corollary to the right to organize provided in ILO convention 87.

About Decent Work and Decent Work Check

Compare your own situation with the international labour standards and how they are applied in Saudi Arab. At the end of the checklist you will see how things stand for you. You may be better off than what the international standards prescribe, but you should not be worse off. Behind every answer, you can find a short explanation of what your rights are; nationally and internationally. So you see right away if you can improve your situation.

The Decent Work Check makes the pretty abstract Conventions and legal texts tangible. Because, in the end, you want to know what your rights on the job mean in practice, what you may claim and what protection you are entitled to in case something unexpectedly does go wrong. The Decent Work Check employs double comparison system. It first compares national laws with international labour standards and gives a score to the national situation (happy or sad face). It allows workers to compare their real situation with national regulations in the country. Workers then compare their own score both at national and international levels. The Decent Work Check is based on de jure labour provisions, as found in the labour legislation. The real practice is informed by the employees themselves. This Check is different from other indices like World Bank's Doing Business Indicators or even ISSA's Social Security Programs throughout the World as it is not only descriptive in nature (bereft of any subjective opinions) but also that it covers a lot of different variables. The Revised Decent Work Check is also designed while taking into account upcoming Decent Work Indicators. While Decent Work Indicators focus more on statistics, our priority is informing workers about their rights through this Decent Work Check. Decent Work Check is useful both for employees and employers. It gives them knowledge, which is the first step towards any improvement. It informs employees of their rights at the workplace while simultaneously enlightening employers about their obligations. Decent Work Check is also useful for researchers, labour rights organizations conducting surveys on the situation of rights at work and general public wanting to know more about the world of work.

WageIndicator teams, around the world, have found out that workers, small employers and labour inspectors don't even know the labour law.

When you are informed - being a workers, self-employed, employee, employer, policy maker, labour inspector - there is a greater possibility that you ask for your rights (as a worker), you comply with rules (as an employer) and you strive to enforce these (as a labour inspector). As soon as you complete the DecentWorkCheck, you see which issues need improvement in your work life.

This is exactly the strategy chosen in the debates in many WageIndicator countries. In the debates with roughly 20-30 people around the table from all sides, the decent Work Check has soon the effect of a mini social dialogue. The people who run the dialogue are equally well informed.

The international labour standards are laid down in ILO-Conventions. ILO is the specialised body of the United Nations working on labour issues and was founded in 1919. In the ILO, negotiations are always going on between governments of the member states, national trade unions and employers associations regarding work related issues like rights at work and social protection. These negotiations may take years, but eventually lead to so called Conventions or Recommendations. In Conventions, minimum standards are laid down. Conventions are not the law, but the intention is that member states subscribe to the standard in question. The proper way to do that is to have these Conventions ratified by parliament and then make national laws (Some countries may follow the system of self-executing treaties). National law can be enforced. ILO-Conventions are usually accompanied by Recommendations on how to implement the standards.

Since 1999, the ILO works according to the so called Decent Work Agenda. In the meantime, the Decent Work Agenda has been widely accepted as an important strategy to fight poverty and foster development. The Agenda has been incorporated in the Millennium Development Goals of the United Nations. In short, the idea behind Decent Work is first of all an income which allows the working individual a good life. Moreover, at work, everybody has an equal chance to develop themselves; working conditions are safe; there is no instance of child and forced/bonded labour; and discrimination does not occur. Trade unions are allowed a real say in work related matters and the state has created a social safety net for all especially for the sick, weak, elderly and expecting women.
